Groton PEO Chapter AC celebrates 100th Anniversary

by Dorene Nelson

Chapter AC, the Groton chapter of P.E.O., celebrated its one hundredth birthday on December 1, 2024. P.E.O. is a Philanthropic Educational Organization which helps women through scholarships, awards, and continuing education programs.

It is amazing that any organization can still be active after one hundred years! There are a few reasons for this success. First of all, the members are from the Groton area so they know each other really well. They enjoy each other's company and look forward to their monthly meetings.

There also seems to be "generational" connection; a member asks HER daughter who will years later invite HER daughter!

The ladies share a common belief in the important value and necessity of a higher education keeps us working hard, attending the meetings, and knowing the success of our club and its work.

Chapter AC started with fourteen members and now has thirty-three active members. Grace Gage became interested in P.E.O. through a friend of hers and with the help of Fran Williams established the Groton chapter, the 29th chapter in South Dakota.

In the beginning there were two meetings a month with dues of $3.00 a year! No refreshments were provided during these early meetings except for special occasions. The AC Chapter had members with widely varying talents such as musicians, poets, and writers.

The first project for Chapter AC was the Educational Loan Fund, with each member contributing ten cents to finance the project. During the 1930's and World War II, however, even the ten cent monthly dues became a financial struggle for many.

Things have changed over the years, but the membership continues to be composed of diversified members who provide entertainment, clever programs, and delicious refreshments!

The P.E.O. Sisterhood has brought together more than a half a million women in the United States and Canada who are passionate about helping women advance and improve their lives through education.

P.E.O. originally started as a friendship of seven women in Mount Pleasant, Iowa. It is one of the oldest women's organizations in North America with nearly 5,500 chapters.

P.E.O. was founded on January 21, 1869, by seven students at Iowa Wesleyan University in Mount Pleasant, Iowa. This circle of like-minded individuals was bonded by its enthusiasm for women's opportunities and expanded to include women off campus as well.

One of the Sisterhood's main projects was the establishment of Cottey College, an important and successful center of learning and advancement for young women.

P.E.O. members take great pride in transforming the lives of women by providing grants, scholarships, awards, and loans for higher education. The International Chapter of the P.E.O. Sisterhood owns and supports Cottey College, a distinguished liberal arts college dedicated solely to the education and advancement of women.

The AC Chapter donates to various projects which are supplemented by member dues and various fundraising activities. This financial help has provided loans and grants to help with the education of young women from the Groton area. One of the local members even pursued her secondary education at Cottey College.

The past year has been particularly challenging for Groton's AC Chapter due to the loss of eight members due to age and illness. Included in this number were a sixty-year member and a few fifty plus year members. These ladies provided valuable guidance and leadership for the group.

Chapter AC has served as the hostess chapter for several state conventions and are excited to continue their involvement in the community and for all of P.E.O. The group continues to grow, remaining dedicated to the P.E.O. Sisterhood.

Chapter AC members love each other as sisters and continue with their work and support for each other and for P.E.O. International. These dedicated individuals hope to involve other young ladies who will carry on this valuable journey for another hundred years!

Chapter AC awards a STAR scholarship to deserving and outstanding Groton High School senior. The winners of the STAR Scholarships are as follows: 2012-Erin Sternhagen, 2014-Joellen Gonsoir, 2017-Keri Pappas, 2019-Anne Marie Smith and 2024-Ashlyn Sperry.

The STAR Scholarship was established in 2009 to provide scholarships for exceptional women in their final year of high school to attend a post secondary educational institution in the following year.

P.E.O. makes a difference in the lives of young women, and Groton's Chapter AC looks forward to continuing this amazing goal. P.E.O. members believe that education unlocks doors and creates endless possibilities. Together they can help women reach for the stars.

The current officers are as follows: President-Ann Gibbs; Vice President-Chris Wheeting; Recording Secretary-Jeanne Wanous; Corresponding Secretary-Carna Atherton-Pray; Treasurers-Jennifer Thompson and Penny Stolle; Chaplain-Kelly Clark; and Guard-Carly Wheeting.

Groton school board discusses facility projects, reviews preliminary 2025-2026 calendar

by Elizabeth Varin

The Groton Area School District board reviewed potential priorities for upcoming facility projects during its latest meeting, following a Buildings, Grounds, and Transportation Committee discussion.

The committee, made up of district staff and board members Tigh Flihs and TJ Harder, met November 20 to discuss district building priorities. It came after community member and Groton football advocate Tom Woods asked the board whether they wanted to move forward with finding grant funding and matching community money for improvements to the school's football field.

Superintendent Joe Schwan told the board he has requested quotes for some of the possible field projects, including irrigation, grading, seeding or sodding, rebuilding the crows nest, replacing the sound equipment and more. However, those quotes haven't been returned yet.

"If we know what we're doing, is it the best way of spending money," he said. "I don't think we've really answered that yet."

Board member Nick Strom asked why the district couldn't play soccer at the football field, to which Schwan replied that the ground would get torn up quickly. Keeping the field in good, playable condition would be difficult.

The committee also discussed future plans for the school, including overarching goals for the future, said board President Grant Rix.

2025-2026 preliminary budget discussed

The preliminary calendar has the first day of school scheduled for August 20, 2025. The last day of school would be May 13, 2026.

However, dates are subject to change, including the winter break period.

The preliminary calendar includes a half-day on December 23, 2025, with classes resuming January 6, 2026.

Staff aren't excited about having school on December 23, said Superintendent Joe Schwan. If there is no school on Tuesday, December 23, there will likely be attendance issues on Monday, December 22.

If the holiday break begins December 19, a day could be added to the beginning of the school year and one to the end of the school year, Schwan said.

Schwan added he can bring the calendar back to the board in January if they would like to review it then.

- The board approved hiring Teresa Davies as a food service team member.

Weekly Vikings Roundup

By Jordan Wright

This game had all the makings of a trap game. Kirk Cousins was coming back to Minnesota, where he spent the past six seasons. The Falcons had lost their last three games, and they needed a win to stay in playoff contention. The Vikings, meanwhile, had won their last five games and already had double-digit wins in a season most "experts" said would be a down year for the purple and gold. Instead, the Vikings played perhaps the best game of their season and ran away with a 42-21 win, their first time scoring more than 40 points in five years.

The Falcons couldn't have written a better start to the game. They got the opening kickoff and went 70 yards on 11 plays to take a 7-0 lead, then forced the Vikings to punt, giving them the ball back with a chance to take a big early lead. The Falcons were moving the ball well again, but the Vikings' defense stiffened up and got the ball back for the offense after a failed fourth-down attempt by Atlanta. Two plays later, Sam Darnold hit Jordan Addison for a 49-yard touchdown, tying the game 7-7 to close out the first quarter.

Three plays into the second quarter Josh Metellus picked off an errant Kirk Cousins pass, but the Vikings' offense couldn't do anything with the sudden change of possession and went three-and-out. The Falcons ran eight plays on their next drive but only managed 27 yards before punting. Starting from the 20-yard line, the Vikings went 80 yards on nine plays, culminating in a TD catch for Justin Jefferson and giving the Vikings a 14-7 lead. With two minutes left in the half, Cousins and the Falcons' offense quickly marched down the field and kicked a field goal, cutting their deficit to four points going into halftime.

The Vikings got the ball to begin the second half, but Will Reichard (who is back from injury) missed a field goal. The Falcons also kicked a field goal on their first possession of the second half, but they made theirs, closing the gap 13-14. With the Falcons closing in, the Vikings wasted no time, and four plays later Darnold connected with Jefferson for a 52-yard touchdown, extending the lead to eight points. The Falcons, not wanting to be outdone, had a five-play, 70-yard TD drive – and they converted the two-point attempt, tying the game 21-21 entering the fourth quarter.

If you are anything like me, you were nervous entering the final 15 minutes. But the Vikings, in rare form, put the pedal to the metal and completely dominated the Falcons to close out the game. Darnold hit Addison for an 11-yard score, then the Falcons fumbled the ensuing kickoff, which led to ANOTHER Darnold to Addison TD connection, giving the Vikings a two-score lead. Cousins tried to lead a comeback, but Byron Murphy had a beautiful interception, giving the Vikings' offense the ball back at their two-yard-line. Seven plays and 98 yards later, Aaron Jones put the nail in the coffin with a 15-yard TD run, giving us the final score of 42-21.

Sam Darnold completed 22 of 28 passes for 347 yards and five(!) touchdowns with no interceptions. His yards, TDs, and passer rating (157.9) are all career highs. This was the first five-passing TDs game for the Vikings since Daunte Culpepper in 2004 and only the seventh time in team history. It's safe to say Darnold is balling out this year.

Jordan Addison (eight catches for 133 yards and three touchdowns) and Justin Jefferson (seven catches for 132 yards and two touchdowns) had monster games. The Vikings have had some great WR duos in team history, like Cris Carter / Randy Moss, and Adam Thielen / Stefon Diggs, but this is the first time in team history that two Vikings receivers each had over 100 yards and at least two TDs. Jefferson also went over 7,000 career yards this game, making him the first player in NFL history to hit that mark before their 26th birthday.

Defensively, the Vikings only had one sack on the day (Jamin Davis, who was recently signed off the Packers' practice squad). However, the team did have two interceptions (Josh Metellus and Byron Murphy). Murphy's six interceptions this season is the most by a Vikings player since Jimmy Hitchcock had seven in 1998.

Looking ahead, the Vikings play on Monday night (12/16) at home against the Bears. This is a divisional matchup for the second time in the past four weeks, so anything can happen. The Vikings need this win to keep pace with the Detroit Lions (12-1) in the NFC North race and to keep the Packers (9-4) at bay. Skol!

SD511 Update

South Dakota travelers rely on SD511 for real-time travel information, including road conditions, closures, construction, incidents, weather forecasts, and roadway camera images, especially during winter. This year, the South Dakota Department of Transportation (SDDOT) has partnered with numerous counties and tribes across the state allowing them to directly update road conditions on the statewide SD511 system.

SDDOT provides a 511 website at <https://sd511.org>, mobile apps for both iOS and Android devices, and the legacy 511 phone number that can be dialed toll-free anywhere in South Dakota. Callers outside South Dakota can dial 800-MYSD511 (800-697-3511). People can also subscribe to receive text messages and/or email notifications for road closure updates and travel advisories along routes of their choice.

Craig Smith, SDDOT Director of Operations, noted, "Local officials will now be able to designate their counties and tribal areas as "no travel advised" or "roads closed" during severe storms. The local restrictions will be displayed on SD511's maps and road condition reports and transmitted to navigation app providers, enabling travelers to plan and complete their travel more safely."

To date, sixty of the state's sixty-six counties and eight of nine tribes are registered to participate this winter.

Brown County is one of the counties that has partnered with SD DOT to help provide, up to date travel and road information.

Brown County takes this very seriously as we know this affects the people of our county, businesses, and people traveling thru. Safety of the travelers and our responders is foremost in the decision-making process.

Having 511 on a local level is an outstanding tool in helping keep travelers in our county safe during inclement winter weather.

For more information or questions please call the Brown County Emergency Management office at 605-626-7122.

We the People

The South Dakota Humanities Council is making available a weekly column -- "We the People" -- that focuses on the U.S. Constitution. It is written by David Adler, who is president of The Alturas Institute, a non-profit organization created to promote the Constitution, gender equality, and civic education.

By David Adler

Constitutional Character as Destiny

If it is true, as the Athenian philosopher Heraclitus said, that "character is destiny," then it may be said that a nation's constitution is its destiny. Does a nation's constitution exalt fundamental principles-- due process, equal protection and the rule of law, and freedom of speech, press and religion? Equally revealing of a nation's character, are its laws, policies and programs. They reveal its values, as Aristotle said, and open a window onto its soul. How does a country treat the poor, the hungry, the downtrodden and dispossessed? In the aftermath of a bitterly divisive presidential election in which constitutional norms were given short shrift, there is merit in contemplating the character of the U.S. Constitution, particularly as it reflects some of the Framers' concerns to corral power, their historical reforms and remedies, and the relevance of Enlightenment philosophy to our political discussions.

There was, first, the Framers' abiding belief that political power, like government itself, is a necessary evil. Power corrupts and it must be limited and controlled, harnessed and brought in line with civic order. The Constitution, with its emphasis on enumeration of powers, separation of powers, checks and balances, and boundaries to fence in legislative, executive and judicial power, reflects the fundamental distrust of power that animated the American Revolution, and which has remained a legacy. As Jefferson wrote, "In questions of power, let no more be heard of confidence in man, but bind him down from mischief by the chains of the Constitution."

While European countries concentrated authority in the executive, the Framers dispersed it, an arrangement born of deep distrust of executive power as wielded by King George III and taught in the lessons of history that they absorbed. Presidential power—its possibilities and the challenges it poses to our legal order—permeate our national discussions. The Framers broke from the monarchical model that governed foreign affairs and conferred upon Congress, not the president, the lion's share of the nation's foreign policy powers.

The Framers envisioned judicial review as a means of policing legislative and executive power. Constitutional landscaping, in the form of early amendments—the addition of the Bill of Rights—advanced the aims and purposes of constitutional governance, in the spirit of creating a more perfect union, but their scope and application were the subject of dispute then, as they are now.

Undergirding the structure of the system that they created, an overhaul of the Articles of Confederation, refinement of early state constitutions and an application of the lessons learned from the 17th Century English Civil Wars, particularly as they illuminated the evolving idea that legitimate governmental power springs from the people and that it should be exercised in conformance with statutes and judicial decisions, was the intellectual process for discussions about government and politics that emerged from the Enlightenment.

The founders, children of the Enlightenment, were men of experience and understanding, and they were familiar with the influential role of "propaganda" in politics—including the American Revolution. They did not mean, by use of this term, to include important state papers and weighty pamphlets, but rather appeals to passion and prejudice. What they hoped for was discourse that reflected sustained arguments, appeals to reason, logic, principles, evidence, facts and intellectual coherence, befitting a new political order grounded in the higher goal of the politics of persuasion rather than one subject to what today is understood to be disinformation and misinformation. Citizens could be misled and fooled by demagoguery, of course, but the pursuit of republican ideals required truth, for a sovereign people could hardly be said to consent to government if they are fed false information by governmental officials or candidates for office. The founders believed in the power of ideas, their cogency and the quality of argumentation as forces to lead the Republic. They believed in something greater than self-interest and self-gain.

In the wake of the election, described by many as overly intense and even unsavory, there are good reasons for American citizens to recall the aspirations of the Enlightenment, the ideals—facts, truths and evidence—that ought to guide our national discussions. A civic-minded Republic, adequately informed, determined to hold candidates and officials accountable for what they say and what they do, can shape governmental behavior and play a vital role in ensuring loyalty to the Constitution which, when you think about it, is our destiny.

Dear EarthTalk: Are mainstream dish soaps really that bad for the planet? And if so, what are some greener alternatives? -- P. McGrath, Boulder, CO

Popular dish soaps often claim to easily tackle grease, leave dishes sparkling clean and uphold commitments to sustainability and safety. But these promises are often misleading. These products may deliver on cleaning power, but they often come at a high cost to human health, animal welfare and the environment. Many well-known dish soaps contain synthetic chemicals and additives that are harmful.

The main chemicals in dish soaps include Methylisothiazolinone, 4-dioxane, and fragrance and dye additives. Methylisothiazolinone is a synthetic preservative which inhibits the growth of bacteria and fungi, helping to give sponges a long useful life. The chemical is also a skin irritant for many and highly toxic in aquatic environments. 4-dioxane, though not intentionally added into dish soaps, is the byproduct of other chemical reactions. As a recognized groundwater pollutant, 4-dioxane is notoriously difficult to filter out during water treatment. The lemony-fresh scent many associate with cleanliness comes from synthetic fragrances, which act as air and aquatic pollutants. Dyes, which create visual appeal, are persistent pollutants that can linger in the environment for decades, contaminating waterways.

The environmental harm of dish soap extends beyond usage to its production. The industry ranks as the fourth-largest contributor to toxic pollution, with weighty impacts on communities near production facilities. The factories emit high levels of harmful chemicals, worsening climate change and exposing local populations to increased cancer risks. The toxic footprint also extends along transportation routes, especially from South Carolina through Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas.

Luckily, there are several options that are better for the environment and individual health. Cleancult Liquid Dish Soap is made from plant bases and does not use animal testing. It cleans efficiently, is easy on sensitive skin, does not contain harmful chemical, and received an "A" environmental rating. Dr. Bronner's Pure Castile Liquid Soap, generally known as a camping dish soap, is another grade "A" certified soap with strong Environmental, social, and governance (ESG) principles guiding production. It uses basic ingredients, designed to be safe in waterways. Koala EcoNatural Dish Soap is made without synthetic fragrances, using essential oils instead, and holds two toxic chemical-free certifications. These alternatives are available at a slightly higher price point, but are much worth the investment.

"Anatomical Variations: Connecting Research & Patient Care"

The human body is composed of a typical pattern of anatomy, yet every structure varies in form from person to person. For example, humans develop with a standard set of defined muscles, yet the shape and mass of each muscle varies significantly among individuals. Sometimes, "anatomical variations" develop – that is, anatomical structures that do not conform to the typical range of regular morphology (for example, an entirely separate "extra" muscle that develops in one person).

Ethan Snow, PhD

Human anatomy is so intricate that the prevalence of an anatomical variation is thought to be certain in every individual; in this regard, what makes each of us unique is the very thing we have in common. Certain variations can elicit complex symptoms, muddle diagnoses, and complicate treatments. Fortunately, though, most anatomical variations are asymptomatic and pose little to no clinical concern. Sometimes variations can even be beneficial; for example, an accessory muscle-tendon unit can be useful autograft material in musculoskeletal reconstruction surgeries.

Anatomical variations are challenging to study because they are often found incidentally. In surgery, clinicians operate in a limited window of visibility in order to complete procedures with minimal incisions. When surgeons find an unexpected variation in their operating window, they often only see part of it and are not able to expose the entire structure. Anatomists, however, dissect the entire body (as an embalmed cadaver) and expose variations in full detail. Cadaveric case analyses of anatomical variations provide clinicians with insights for adjusting protocols to suit variations during surgery and in noninvasive treatment plans, and they help anatomists teach clinically significant variations to students learning human anatomy.

Strategic anatomist-clinician collaborations foster the mutual exchange of expert-level skills to promote the highest-quality medical education and patient care, particularly involving anatomical variations. These collaborative relationships form the fundamental underpinning of evidenced-based medicine and embrace the "bench-to-bedside" model for making translational research influential to patient care.

Modern technology has improved the study of anatomical variations. Many anatomical case analyses now involve radiologic imaging, histopathology, digital modeling, and other contemporary techniques, making them more relevant to clinicians and patient care. In the fast-paced disciplines of education and medicine, innovations such as virtual reality (VR) are being used to advance anatomy education and improve patient care. While defined variations and clinical conditions can be simulated by technology and offer many impactful benefits, tech-based programs are currently unable to generate accurate models of potential anatomical variations.

For the nearly 2500 years, human cadavers from whole body donors have served instrumental roles in establishing anatomical knowledge, including what is known about anatomical variations. Human cadavers are unparalleled for tactile feedback, unscripted anatomical variations, and clinical associations. They also convey more than anatomy; they are considered by most students as their first patients and teach students about clinical anatomy, variation, disease, ethics, humanity, respect, and many other important values. Educators, clinicians, and students remain extremely grateful to whole body donors for their selfless contributions to advancing medical education, knowledge, practice, and patient care – particularly as related to anatomical variations.
