GGA Golf Tourney

When budget cuts to education by the state legislature resulted in the Groton School District reducing funding to some programs, including the high school golf program. The Groton Golf Association was born.

This group of parents and other golf enthusiasts has risen the funds each year to continue the golfing program at the high school level. One of the ways they raise funds is through the GGA Golf Tournament, which was held Saturday with 12 teams participating.

Each team of four played 18 holes of scramble golf. The team of Randy Stanley, Brandon Stanley, Jordan Klien and Cody Garvey finished in the top spot for the championship flight shooting a 59. Finishing in second place was the team of Maddie Colestock, Tyler Sperry, Lance Frohling and Brett Merkel with a 61.

Ryan Koehler, Dylan Hanson, Brandon Spanier and Drake Patterson finished first in the First Flight with a 62. The second place team was Brad Hanson, Dave Carlson, Terry Gilchrist and Kyle Spencer with a 64.

Several door prizes and silent auction items were given away during the day. Also awarded were pin prizes. Brett Merkel had the longest putt on hole #9. Michelle Muilenberg was closet to the pin on #4 for the women and Brandon Stanley was closet to the pin on #8 for the men. Maddie Colestock had the longest drive for the women on #2 and Jordan Klien won for the men on hole # 5. Jackson Waage won the putting contest in sudden death.

An open letter to United States Postmaster General Patrick Donahoe

Dear Postmaster General Donahoe:

I do hope this letter arrives at your office in reasonable time.

Sarcasm aside, there was a time when I put a First Class stamp on a letter and mailed it, I had confidence, depending on its destination, it would get there overnight or within two or three days. There was a time when newspaper publishers could expect their latest edition would reach mail subscribers in a reasonable time frame as well.

Today, that confidence doesn't exist.

And your latest plan to close more than 80 mail processing plants around the country – including the Dakota Central facility in Huron – will erase any shreds of remaining confidence.

You have a difficult job. Mail trends have not been kind to your business the past several years, thanks in large part to the internet and 9-11. First Class mail – still the biggest generator of revenue for you – has dropped more than 35 percent the last dozen years or so.

So how do you clear a path for the survival of the Postal Service in the face of some mighty strong headwinds? Obviously, you need to reduce expenditures and tighten the belt to fit new realities.

But I believe your latest plan goes too far. From the 30,000-foot view at USPS headquarters, your latest plant consolidation plan may look good on the spreadsheet. But looking at it from here on Main Street and the mailbox-dotted gravel roads of South Dakota, it's a clunker.

The newspaper publishers of South Dakota who belong to the trade association I work for, know it's a clunker as well. They have been fighting desperately now for several years to find ways to get their newspapers delivered to customers in a timely manner. Fighting desperately despite the roadblocks and hurdles put up by your organization.

Closing more mail processing plants will only contribute to the sclerosis of the mail network in this country. Your plan doesn't save the Postal Service; it just makes things worse.

The degradation and decline don't happen all at once, but they happen. Newspaper subscribers become frustrated they can't get their hometown paper delivered to them in a reasonable time, so they stop paying for it when the subscription comes due. Advertisers become frustrated when their promotions and marketing specials can't reach the marketplace soon enough.

But it is not just newspapers. It is all businesses that rely on the mail for delivery of invoices, checks, correspondence and so much more. It's people who live so far from town that they must rely on the mail for delivery of their medical prescriptions. It's the delivery of farm parts and legal documents. The list goes on.

Mail service always has been and remains a vital part of the infrastructure serving rural America. For that matter, our entire country. Good, reliable mail service supports a strong economy and a connected, engaged society.

Let's not degrade and destroy that network. Instead, we should be working to protect and provide for a strong, reliable mail service that serves all of our country.

If you won't do it (and your latest plant consolidation announcement suggests you won't), then we call on Congress to step in and put a halt to it. Congress should freeze any further plant consolidations and closings until it can agree upon meaningful reform legislation for the Postal Service.

Postal reform legislation has been percolating in Congress for some time now. Congress needs to act.

Congress needs to remove the onerous, overly aggressive provisions that require the Postal Service to greatly accelerate set-asides for postal retirees' health benefits. Doing so would help the Postal Service's balance sheet and remove some of the pressures that lead to policies and actions that have hurt, not helped, your organization.

Postal reform legislation is not a headlines-grabbing, popularity-poll issue that Congress rallies around. Nevertheless, Congress needs to act now, before your organization, Mr. Postmaster General, regresses into a shell of its former self from which it cannot recover.

I thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

David Bordewyk, General Manager, South Dakota Newspaper Association

Camille Sippel of Groton among 39 high-achieving students selected for CBA Honors Academy

Camille Sippel of Groton is among 39 freshmen selected to be part of the College of Business Administration Honors Academy at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln this fall.

A graduate of Groton Area High School, plans to major in business administration.

After a successful inaugural year of the program, the CBA Honors Academy had a nearly 20 percent increase in applications this year.

"We are encouraged by the increase in the number of quality applicants who applied for the Honors Academy," said Donde Plowman, James Jr. and Susan Stuart Dean of the College of Business Administration. "Those selected went through a rigorous application process and were ultimately selected based on their overall scholastic achievement, exceptional leadership experience, communication skills and the way they demonstrated becoming a leader in the business world."

The students are from eight states and will major in seven majors at CBA. They will complete most of their foundation and core business courses together as a cohort using an action-based learning style focused on the development of critical thinking, technical and communication skills.

They will also participate in leadership activities to build their skills and participate in student competitions. Academy students will benefit from connecting and working with corporate partners from around the country. Additionally, they receive internships and study-abroad experiences to learn valuable lessons and prepare them to make an impact in the business world after graduation.

"We're all very excited to welcome the fall 2014 cohort to the academy," said Erin Burnette, assistant director of the academy. "Their scholastic achievements are very impressive and their overall enthusiasm for maximizing their college experience will make them tremendous assets to the program. I look forward to helping them achieve great things over the next four years."

NSU Biology Team Tracking Mosquitoes Responsible for Deadly West Nile Virus

ABERDEEN, S.D. – Six Northern State University biology/environmental science students and two NSU biologists are part of statewide efforts in South Dakota to identify and test mosquitoes that can carry West Nile virus.

The NSU biology team has mosquito trap stations located at eight sites in Brown County. There are two collection stations on Richmond Lake, two at Sand Lake National Wildlife Refuge, one in Warner, one in Stratford, and two others located in rural locations in central Brown County.

Each morning during the week the students travel to the collection sites, retrieve the catch of mosquitoes from the day previous and attach a new trap bag and fresh supplies. The students return to the biology lab on the NSU campus and begin the tedious task of separating, categorizing and counting the many mosquitoes.

Each trap can yield as few as a dozen mosquitoes to as many as over a thousand. Most traps average 300-500 mosquitoes daily. The largest number taken in any one trap so far this summer is more than 900.

The NSU team is specifically looking for the mosquito species Culex tarsalis, which are regarded as the most likely carriers of West Nile virus. Those mosquitoes are separated and placed into vials and sent to the South Dakota Department of Health in Pierre for testing for the West Nile virus.

This is the second year that Northern State University has participated in the statewide mosquito tracking effort, which is funded through an award from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the South Dakota Department of Health. The NSU team has helped expand the Brown County test region beyond the City of Aberdeen and provide the S.D. Department of Health with additional vital resources in the efforts to monitor and control the Culex tarsalis mosquitoes.

"Using a high definition microscope attached to a Dell monitor, NSU biology student Mat Muston points out the identifying characteristics of a Culex tarsalis mosquito, a potential carrier of West Nile virus."

The Mystery of Parkinson's Disease

Parkinson's disease is one of those unfair illnesses. Actually a group of conditions affecting movement, Parkinson's disease results from different kinds of injuries to a specific part of the brain. Although many believe it takes a genetic tendency plus some environmental assault to cause it, still we don't know why some get Parkinson's and some don't.

To better understand this mystery, the following are examples of known and definable causes for the brain injury:

At the time of the 1918 influenza lung epidemic, there was a form of that same viral infection, which attacked the brain, resulting in what was commonly called "the sleeping sickness." Millions were affected and in some a Parkinson's-like movement disorder appeared years later. The book and movie entitled "Awakenings" by famous neurologist Oliver Sacks played by Robin Williams described this story.

Sometimes a Parkinson's-like condition follows severe or repeated physical trauma to the brain such as what happens in boxing. Mohamed Ali is one who struggles with the consequences of repeated brain injury manifesting in tremors, rigidity, the slowing down of spontaneous movement, and a loss of mental acuity also called dementia pugilistica.

The long-term side effect of certain toxins can result in a Parkinson's-like condition. Examples include manganese dust exposure, which can occur in mining or in the steel industry; carbon disulfide exposure, which can occur in the rayon fabric industry; and carbon monoxide poisoning, which can result from burning anything in an enclosed space.

In the 1980s in California, a small group of heroin addicts took an illicit street drug contaminated with a chemical called MPTP, which resulted in a severe Parkinson's-like movement disorder. Scientists took this unfortunate discovery to simulate Parkinson's disease in lab animals, which has greatly increased the understanding of Parkinson's.

At this time however the cause for most cases of Parkinson's disease still remains a mystery. It is one of those unjust illnesses that can occur in any one of us and at any time for no reason that we can define.

Let us hope research moves forward to find ways to protect us.

Grant Rix joins Groton Area School Board

There was a changing of the guard at Monday's annual dual meetings of the Groton School Board. Each year the board splits the July meeting to close out the last school year and start the new one.

The board said good-bye to board member Joy Voss and welcomed new member Grant Rix to the board. Dorene Nelson stepped down as the board president and Steve Smith was elected to the position. Kelly Kjelden was re-elected as the board vice president. The "ad hoc" committees will remain the same with Rix replacing Voss on the personnel, policy and curriculum committee.

The board voted to keep the meeting schedule the same as it has been, meeting on the second and fourth Monday of each month with the exception of only meeting on the second Monday during May, July, August and December. The board also voted to keep the salaries for board members at zero.

"When we voted to take the pay cut," Nelson said. "I said I wouldn't take any pay until the four programs that we were forced to limit funding too were fully funded again. They still aren't fully funded, so I vote to keep the salaries at zero."

During the budget hearing, Business Manager Mike Weber reported that all accounts were healthy.

There won't be any need to raise the tax levies for next year," Weber said. "As value added infrastructure (also known as other revenue) and local land prices increase, so does our school district valuation."

In fact the valuation has increased over $300 million over the past three years and the projected estimate for fiscal year 2015 is $914 million.

"As a result the corresponding taxes generated by state mandated tax levies will exceed recognized need in state aid funding," Weber added. "In the spring of 2015 I anticipate that we will no longer receive state aid funding, surviving only on our locally generated tax revenue."

Weber stressed to board members the importance of keeping the other revenue tax dollars generated in our area for use in the same area.

"With the push at the state legislature to take these funds and spread them across the state," Weber said. "We would lose a large portion of our funding. Be sure to impress the need to keep the money generated by our patrons here in our school district when talking to state representatives."

One account did see a minor problem as

Jean Lowary, formerly from Groton and Claremont, will celebrate her 90th birthday on July 22. Greetings may be sent to her at Touchmark All Saints, 111 E 17th St Apt 116, Sioux Falls, SD 57104

$2,176 in bad debt had to be written off in the OST program. Since then changes have been made with a new policy that limits charges to more than $100. OST is the Out of School program that parents pay for to watch students before and after school.

There were no changes made to the school lunch prices, milk and orange juice tickets or the activity gate admissions for the 2014-2015 school year.

During the principals reports it was noted that the supply list for the new school year have been sent to area businesses and is up on the website.

School Superintendent Joe Schwan reported on the new Smart Snacks Program which will take effect this fall. The program is part of the National School Lunch Program run by the USDA. In 2010 they released the changes to the school lunch program, followed the changes to the school breakfast programs. This year it affects the food and beverages sold to students during the school day, especially through school fundraisers. One program affected will be the Wake-Up Wednesday fundraiser done by the Debate program. So far the program does not affect the concession stands or food and beverage sold after school.

A second reading and approval was given to the recommended policy changes in the middle school/high school student handbook and the policy for volunteer drivers. There was some discussion on what happens when students ride a bus to an activity, but ride home with another parent, technically, the student is the school district's responsibility to the student is returned to the school. Some schools have a policy that if you are in an activity, you ride the bus to the event and back again. No action was taken at this time; it is currently up to the coaches to set the policy on riding home.

Approval was given for the hiring of Vonnie Lutz and Jill Krueger as special needs para-professionals for the 2014-2015 school year at $10.25/hr. Approval was also given to add five additional working days to Aaron Helvig's contract. He is the tech coordinator.

Three open enrollments were approved, one from Aberdeen and two from the Langford school districts.

St. John's Lutheran Church youth group will be able to use a school van on their mission trip to Bloomington MN on July 18-20 and the Groton Legion Baseball team will have the use of a bus for the regional tournament if needed while their bus is being fixed. Both will be charged the rate established by the school's activity trip expense chart.

All 15 items on the consent agenda were approved; this included the designation of the official bank as Wells Fargo, the legal counsel as Rodney Freeman and the Groton Independent as the official school newspaper.
