7 Ways to Cut Your Holiday Expenses

When it comes to holiday spending, waiting in store lines all night and jostling for the scarce will mean very little if you don't have a budget that shapes your finances year-round. With the average U.S. household spending $600-$700 in 2014 for the holidays, putting that money together shouldn't be a game of chance. Here are some tips to get it right:

1. Before you make a list, plan. How's your debt? Do you have an emergency fund or any savings put aside? Start the holiday season by getting a handle on what you owe and what you're spending day-to-day. Then plan a holiday budget (www.practicalmoneyskills.com/YourHolidayBudget) as early as possible that allows you to spend wisely.

2. See what spending is really necessary. It's tough to cut young kids off a gift list, so turn to the adults. If your finances are limited, it's worth asking adult friends and family members if they'd consider a gift swap or forego gifts altogether. They might actually think it's a good idea.

3. Attack your everyday expenses. Want to afford the holidays? Consider evaluating some expensive habits. Try reducing the amount you are spending on expensive nights out. Cook at home and bring your lunch to work. Use public transportation. Compare and cut your auto and home insurance premiums. Turn down the thermostat, dump magazine subscriptions, gym memberships and any other budget item you're not using. You'll find that savings build quickly.

4. Browse before you buy. Assuming you've made a tight gift list, create a gift budget (www.practicalmoneyskills.com/YourGiftLog) tracking precisely what you're willing to pay for every item. For must-have, non-negotiable gifts, you may have to pounce before Thanksgiving Day and Black Friday and Monday for both price and selection. Also, don't forget to budget for holiday entertainment (www.practicalmoneyskills.com/EntertainmentPlanner). It's a potentially huge cost. Plan ahead and don't waver.

5. Create your own Holiday Club. Online savings and money market accounts can allow you to set aside your holiday budget in small amounts throughout the year and they'll pay better rates than the last few banks offering Holiday Club savings accounts.

6. Watch gas and shipping. Smart shoppers weigh the value of store trips versus online shopping. They also keep an eagle eye for advertised online and shipping discounts. Sign up for special deals and coupons, consolidate in-person trips to stores and make sure you review return policies at online and bricks-and-mortar stores before you buy. Paying return fees or missing a window to return a gift entirely can cost big money.

7. Keep good records. Whether you track your finances on paper or on a computer, develop a system that allows you to match your holiday list to what you spend every year. Good recordkeeping not only allows you to track the numbers, but also prevents you from duplicating gifts or overspending year to year. And it's always a good idea to keep a list of what you get from others to make sure you're thanking people appropriately.

Finally, consider whether it's worth making new holiday traditions that go beyond gift giving. Some families consider contributing throughout the year to a joint vacation or reunion fund to bring everyone together. You might also consider the needs of aging or needy relatives who need assistance with chores, transportation or pet care. The holidays are what you make them.

KNOW GOD - HAVE LIFE

"Ill-gotten treasures" bring many feelings as well as pictures to our minds. Some pictures remind us of events where we were taken advantage of by one who made no apologies for stealing our "property." Other feelings are the result of a dishonest sales person who hid the truth from us when we purchasing a valuable item. Usually, there are many numbers involved in large transactions and unless we know what to look for, it's easy to become a "victim" of dishonesty.

However, when we look at some the "valuables" we have collected over time, there may be an item or two we obtained in less than honest methods. They were really "ill-gotten" even though they "belong" to us now.

"Ill-gotten" is a strong phrase that means "treasures gotten as a result of wickedness." We know that wickedness is not compatible with the character of God. It stands in complete contradiction to everything God values. It also cost Him the life of His Son. "Righteousness" on the other hand, clearly states who God is: a God who is consistent with His Word and His ways. Our God is honest and just!

Treasures are a gift from God. And there is nothing wrong with having treasures. But, when they become the "center of life," or the "reason for living," attaining them is self-destructive. They no longer bring satisfaction because they have no "lasting value" - and the "search" continues.

"Righteousness" delivers us from death: physical, spiritual and eternal. Those who live in "righteousness" have no fear of God because their "search" is to know Him.

Prayer: Father, give us a desire to live for "things" that are eternal and have their source in You and Your love. In Jesus' Name, Amen.

Scripture for Today: Proverbs 10:2 Ill-gotten treasures have no lasting value, but righteousness delivers from death.

Turkey season among items on GFP Commission agenda

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — The South Dakota Game, Fish and Parks Commission plans to finalize the turkey hunting season and several other issues this week at its meeting in Sioux Falls.

The panel meets Thursday and Friday at the Ramada Inn in Sioux Falls.

Besides the turkey season, a public hearing at 2 p.m., Thursday will take input on the application fee for bighorn sheep, elk and mountain goat, as well as general fishing provisions.

A full agenda is online at the Game Fish and Parks site: <http://gfp.sd.gov>.

5 keys to Republicans winning the Senate majority

CHARLES BABINGTON, Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are poised to take control of the Senate, provided they avoid Election Day upsets and win at least three of a half-dozen close races they feel they are ahead.

The campaign map gives Republicans several ways of winning the six net seats they need to wrest the Senate majority from Democrats. How they can get there:

DON'T BLOW THE EASY ONES

It would be stunning if Republicans fail to grab three seats in states where veteran Democrats are retiring, and where President Barack Obama lost badly: West Virginia, South Dakota and Montana. Those three states should put the GOP halfway to its goal of six pickups.

TARGET FOUR OTHER STATES OBAMA LOST

Republicans are running hard against Democratic senators in four other states Obama lost, three of them badly. Democrats Mark Pryor in Arkansas and Mary Landrieu in Louisiana look to buck the South's continued drift toward the GOP. In Alaska, Mark Begich seeks re-election in a state the president lost by 14 percentage points.

Democrats feel slightly better about first-term Sen. Kay Hagan of North Carolina, a state Obama won in 2008 and lost in 2012.

GOP victories in three of these four states, added to the easy three, give them the magic six.

DON'T GO BACKWARD

But if Republicans lose any seats they now hold, they will need to take more than six away from Democrats to gain the majority.

Republicans fret the most about Georgia, where Democrat Michelle Nunn and Republican David Perdue are battling hard to succeed retiring GOP Sen. Saxby Chambliss. In Kansas, independent Greg Orman might beat GOP Sen. Pat Roberts, but it's possible Orman would align with the Republicans.

In Kentucky, Republicans see almost no chance that five-term Sen. Mitch McConnell will lose, despite massive spending on a race that's drawn a lot of attention.

WIN IN A FEW STATES MITT ROMNEY LOST

Republicans have a chance to grab Democratic-held seats in two or three states that Obama won in 2012. Their best shots are against first-term Sen. Mark Udall of Colorado, and in Iowa, where Democratic Rep. Bruce Braley is running to replace the retiring Sen. Tom Harkin. Democrats feel slightly better about fending off Republican challenger Scott Brown in New Hampshire, where Sen. Jeanne Shaheen seeks a second term.

KANSAS DECIDES IT ALL?

In Kansas, Orman conceivably could dictate which party controls the Senate, provided he wins in Kansas and the other elections give Democrats 49 seats and Republicans 50. Should he decide to caucus with Democrats, they would control a 50-50 Senate, thanks to Vice President Joe Biden's tie-breaking authority. Or Orman could give Republicans the all-important 51st senator.

5 things to watch in Senate races Tuesday night

CHARLES BABINGTON, Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — All along, the biggest question in this election was whether Republicans could take over the Senate and add it to their solid House majority.

Republicans need to gain six net seats to do so. Three, in states where Democrats are retiring, seem nearly certain: West Virginia, Montana and South Dakota.

Republicans' chief targets elsewhere are Democrats running for re-election in states that President Barack Obama lost: Alaska, Louisiana, Arkansas and North Carolina.

Three other possibilities — Iowa's open seat, and strong challenges to Democratic senators in Colorado and New Hampshire — give Republicans multiple paths to a Senate majority.

Five things to watch on election night:

CAN DEMOCRATS TOPPLE A GOP GIANT IN KENTUCKY?

Kentucky, often an early-reporting state, has seen one of the year's most costly and fierce Senate races. From the start, Democrat Alison Lundergan Grimes faced a steep climb in trying to unseat five-term Sen. Mitch McConnell, who hopes to become majority leader in January.

Pundits like to cite McConnell's relatively low popularity in Kentucky. But that ignores the extreme unlikelihood of Grimes getting votes from conservatives who find McConnell too accommodating and moderate.

Obama lost Kentucky by a whopping 23 percentage points. A Grimes victory would rank among the greatest upsets in modern politics.

WHAT ARE SIGNS OF A STRONG REPUBLICAN NIGHT?

If Republican nominees run ahead of expectations in Virginia and New Hampshire — even if they lose — it will be a bad sign for Democrats elsewhere.

Democratic Sen. Mark Warner of Virginia is expected to cruise past Republican Ed Gillespie. If Gillespie stays within, say, 5 or 6 percentage points, it could suggest tepid support for Democrats.

In New Hampshire, Democrats have always assumed Sen. Jeanne Shaheen would hold off Republican Scott Brown, a former senator from Massachusetts.

If Brown keeps the race razor-close, it's a worrisome sign for Democrats. If Brown defeats Shaheen, Democrats can start packing their bags for the minority side of the aisle.

WHICH WAY WILL NORTH CAROLINA TIP?

North Carolina is one of the nation's most closely divided states politically. Aside from Indiana, where Obama hardly tried in 2012, it's the only state he won once and lost once.

Fittingly, the state's Senate race has stayed relentlessly close.

First-term Democrat Kay Hagan proudly calls herself the Senate's most middle-of-the-road member. She said her GOP challenger, Thom Tillis, speaker of the state House, led a conservative revolution that veered too far right for the centrist state.

This race may be too close for an early call Tuesday night. But both parties will watch intensely, not only for the Hagan-Tillis outcome, but also for hints of where a moderating southern state might trend in the next presidential race.

CAN DEMOCRATS GRAB GEORGIA'S GOP SEAT WITHOUT A RUNOFF?

Georgia Democrat Michelle Nunn and Republican David Perdue have made a few rookie mistakes in vying for the seat that Republican Saxby Chambliss is leaving, but they ran well-funded campaigns.

Obama lost Georgia by 7 percentage points, and it's seen as a Republican state that might reach toss-up status in few years. A Nunn victory would vastly improve Democrats' hopes of keeping the Senate majority. A Perdue win would let Republicans sigh in relief.

But the results might not be known for two months. With a third-party candidate running, a Jan. 6 runoff between Nunn and Perdue is possible. If that runoff decides which party controls the Senate, Georgia will see campaign spending like never before.

WILL SENATE CONTROL BE IN DOUBT FOR DAYS OR WEEKS?

Even without a Georgia runoff, it's possible that Senate control will be in doubt when most Americans go to bed Tuesday night.

A Dec. 6 runoff in Louisiana seems likely.

The Alaska race between Democratic Sen. Mark Begich and Republican Dan Sullivan could be so close that the final tally could arrive with the East Coast's sunrise Wednesday, or even later.

Late results from Louisiana and Alaska won't determine the Senate's control, however, if Republicans do well elsewhere.

Assuming they don't lose in Georgia, Kentucky or Kansas, Republicans could secure the Senate majority with three victories among these competitive states: Arkansas, North Carolina, Iowa, Colorado and New Hampshire.

Rounds says complacency his worst obstacle in race

JAMES NORD, Associated Press

SPEARFISH, S.D. (AP) — U.S. Senate candidate Mike Rounds warned his supporters Sunday at events across western South Dakota that voter complacency is the biggest obstacle to him helping the GOP take back the Senate.

The former governor reminded supporters at a hotel conference center in Spearfish that the South Dakota race was a "keystone" in the Republican Party quest to net six seats and take control of the chamber for the final two years of President Barack Obama's term. The state, where Democratic Sen. Tim Johnson is retiring, is among the top targets for the GOP.

The race unexpectedly turned competitive in early October, but has drifted back in Rounds' favor as Election Day nears. A Sioux Falls Argus Leader/KELO-TV poll released last week showed Rounds nine points ahead of his Democratic opponent, Rick Weiland. Independents Larry Pressler and Gordon Howie are also vying for the open seat.

Throughout the race, Rounds has attempted to tie his opponents to Obama and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, whom he says voters will reject on Tuesday.

"This is an opportunity to fire Harry Reid as the majority leader," Rounds told the crowd of about 20 supporters in Spearfish hotel, which was met with a resounding "Yes!"

Rounds said a Republican Senate would set in motion key policies for South Dakota, including the repeal and replacement of the Affordable Care Act; pushing forward on the Keystone XL pipeline; and removing bureaucracy and regulatory burdens for farmers and businesses. Rounds has consistently sparred with Weiland over the pipeline, which would cut through South Dakota as it transports oil from the Canadian tar sands to Nebraska.

To ensure a Republican sweep — and the future of such projects — Rounds encouraged supporters to bring their friends to the polls. That's the message he stressed to Bill Dore, who was eating an after-church lunch with his wife at the Belle Inn Restaurant in Belle Fourche.

"Our biggest concern really is to get rid of Harry Reid," said Dore, 78, of Whitewood, adding he would be "disgusted" if South Dakota doesn't do its part to tip the Senate.

In the final days of the race, Rounds' opponents have also been rallying support. Weiland had a campaign event with Johnson in Sioux Falls on Sunday evening, while Pressler has been touting major newspaper endorsements from across the state. In the final debate, they hit Rounds hard for his gubernatorial oversight of the EB-5 visa program, which sought investment from wealthy foreigners in exchange for U.S. visas.

When he approached her at the Belle Inn, Mary Warren told Rounds she was the only Democrat at the table. Though the 85-year-old Belle Fourche resident is supporting Pressler in this election, she voted for Rounds twice as governor. Still, EB-5 "doesn't resonate well."

Among supporters, Rounds has been able to brush aside the jabs over the visa program. Dore said it was initially a concern in the primary election, but now he stands behind Rounds.

"I don't understand the EB-5," he said. "I don't intend to because it's going to go away."

Alabama man convicted of impersonating FBI agent

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — A federal jury in South Dakota has found an Alabama man guilty of impersonating an FBI agent in 2010.

U.S. Attorney Brendan Johnson said Michael Thetford, 38, of Alabaster, Alabama, was also convicted last week of possession of a firearm, interstate stalking and tampering with witnesses. The charges carry a maximum penalty of 38 years in prison.

Prosecutors said Thetford showed up at the rural Hughes County home of William and Shirley Winslett in May 2010, claimed he was an FBI agent and accused the couple of being involved in drug trafficking and other crimes. He identified himself as "Agent Russ," displayed FBI and military credentials, and carried a gun.

Prosecutors said Thetford told the couple they needed to undergo a polygraph test. Thetford drove the Winsletts toward Sioux Falls but stopped in Humboldt where he told them he had received a call that cleared them in the drug investigation.

Records show that on the drive back to the Winsletts' home, Thetford learned they were shooting aficionados. He left his gun with the couple before leaving the property and asked William Winslett to repair the trigger.

Over the next several months the Winsletts questioned whether Thetford was a federal agent.

Thetford was arrested in November 2011 in Alabama, where he was tried and sentenced in June of last year to nearly 27 years in prison on child pornography and other charges.

Court records show Thetford entered a plea agreement with federal prosecutors in South Dakota in March 2013 that recommended eight years in prison to be served concurrently to the sentence imposed in Alabama. But a superseding indictment alleging witness tampering was obtained by South Dakota prosecutors in March 2014.

Prosecutors said Thetford sent a threatening letter to the Winsletts hoping to stop them from cooperating with authorities while he was being held in an Alabama jail.

An associate of Thetford testified at the trial that Thetford had planned to take possession of and sell a property in Alabama that belonged to the Winsletts, and he had traveled to South Dakota to investigate whether they planned to return to Alabama.

Thetford's public defenders could not be reached Sunday. A sentencing hearing was scheduled for Jan. 5.

Pilot honored after landing at all SD's airports

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — A Civil Air Patrol pilot captain has been honored by the South Dakota Pilots Association for completing a program that involves landing at all of South Dakota's public-use airports.

Capt. Neil Schmid of the Sioux Falls Composite Squadron has received the "Fly South Dakota" award after completing a program sponsored by the pilots association. The state has 74 public airports.

The three-level program involves attending aviation safety seminars, visiting state museums with aviation displays and landing at South Dakota's public airports.

Schmid has been a pilot for over 25 years. He landed at the final six airports in October in a Civil Air Patrol Cessna-172.

Schmid says his fondest memory is his first landing at the Custer County airport after flying by Mount Rushmore National Memorial and Crazy Horse Memorial.

USD researcher takes to the roof to study bird

VERMILLION, S.D. (AP) — A researcher at the University of South Dakota in Vermillion spent a lot of time on the roof of several flat-top buildings on campus to study the habits of a nocturnal bird.

Biology graduate student Gretchen Newberry had to go where the Common Nighthawk commonly nests. She got permission and watched the birds on top of the I.D. Weeks Library, Al Neuharth Media Center and Richardson Residential Hall when they nested last summer.

The medium-sized, mottled gray-and-white species is found throughout nearly all of North America in the summer and they migrate deep into South America during winter.

Nighthawk numbers appear to be dwindling. The North American Breeding Bird Survey says populations have declined 59 percent from 1966 to 2010.

AP News in Brief

On eve of election, candidates clash over Obama as focus shifts to turnout

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the eve of an election that will decide the Senate majority, it's time for closing arguments and an all-out effort to motivate people to vote.

Republicans have claimed new momentum in midterm campaigns that have centered on President Barack Obama, who is not on Tuesday's ballot. Under the weight of the unpopular president, Democrats are fighting to distance themselves from the White House and convince voters they deserve to maintain the Senate majority for the final two years of Obama's presidency. The GOP is sounding confident that it will take Senate control.

Obama has avoided the nation's most competitive contests in recent weeks, but encouraged Democrats to reject Republican cynicism during campaign stops in Connecticut and Pennsylvania for Democrats in governors' races. He was scheduled to spend Monday in private meetings with his economic team and Federal Reserve Chair Janet Yellen.

"Despite all the cynicism America is making progress," Obama said as he implored Democrats in Connecticut to vote. "Don't stay home. Don't let somebody else choose your future for you."

Meanwhile, GOP officials from Alaska to Georgia have seized on the president's low approval ratings, which have overshadowed an election season in which roughly 60 percent of eligible voters are expected to stay home.

Airwaves crowded in final weekend of campaign as candidates grab any last scrap of TV

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Television airwaves were crammed with political ads over the weekend as candidates emptied their wallets for any last ad time.

In Arkansas, for example, voters theoretically should have seen 34 political commercials a day since Friday, if advertising strategies worked as planned.

The pricey Senate race in Arkansas between Democratic Sen. Mark Pryor and Republican Rep. Tom Cotton, as well as two competitive House contests and one for a soon-to-be-open governor's office, filled the air between Little Rock's television programs.

In North Carolina, candidates and their allies have spent $62 million to run almost 102,000 ads this campaign season. Georgia has seen almost $43 million in ads, running some 65,000 times. And Kentucky has seen at least 79,000 ads at a cost of $34 million.

Terminally ill Oregon woman who became 'death with dignity' advocate takes her lethal drugs

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Brittany Maynard stuck by her decision.

The terminally ill woman who revived a national debate about physician-assisted suicide ended her life Saturday by swallowing lethal drugs made available under Oregon's Death With Dignity Law. She would have been 30 on Nov. 19.

Maynard had been in the national spotlight for about a month since publicizing that she and her husband, Dan Diaz, moved to Portland from Northern California so that she could take advantage of the Oregon law. She told journalists she planned to die Nov. 1, shortly after her husband's birthday, but reserved the right to move the date forward or push it back.

Maynard ended her suffering from brain cancer right on schedule, after hinting at a possible delay in a video released last week.

"She died as she intended — peacefully in her bedroom, in the arms of her loved ones," said Sean Crowley, a spokesman for the advocacy group Compassion & Choices.

US allowed no-fly area amid Ferguson unrest to keep press out; police said move was for safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government allowed police in Ferguson, Missouri, to restrict more than 37 square miles of airspace for nearly two weeks in August for safety reasons, but audio recordings show that local authorities instead wanted to keep news helicopters away during violent street protests.

On Aug. 12, amid demonstrations following the shooting death of 18-year-old Michael Brown, Federal Aviation Administration managers struggled to redefine an earlier flight ban so police helicopters and commercial flights at nearby Lambert-St. Louis International Airport could fly through the area — but not others.

“They finally admitted it really was to keep the media out,” said one FAA manager about the St. Louis County Police Department in a series of recorded telephone conversations obtained by The Associated Press. “But they were a little concerned of, obviously, anything else that could be going on.”

At another point, a manager at the FAA’s Kansas City center said police “did not care if you ran commercial traffic through this TFR (temporary flight restriction) all day long. They didn’t want media in there.”

The conversations contradict claims by the St. Louis County police, which said the restrictions had nothing to do with limiting the press and instead were imposed because of gunshots fired at a police helicopter.

Investigators: Spaceship’s ‘feathering’ system deployed prematurely before craft broke apart

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Virgin Galactic’s experimental spaceship broke apart in flight over California’s Mojave Desert after a device to slow the craft’s descent prematurely deployed, federal investigators said Sunday.

National Transportation Safety Board Acting Chairman Christopher Hart said that while no cause for Friday’s crash of SpaceShipTwo has been determined, investigators found the “feathering” system — which rotates the tail to create drag — was activated before the craft reached the appropriate speed.

The system requires a two-step process to deploy. The co-pilot unlocked the system but Hart said the second step occurred “without being commanded.”

“What we know is that after it was unlocked, the feathers moved into the deploy position and two seconds later we saw disintegration,” Hart said.

The investigation is months from being completed and pilot error, mechanical failure, the design and whether there was pressure to continue testing are among many things being looked at, Hart said.

A resurrection: World Trade Center reopens for business 13 years after 9/11 devastation

NEW YORK (AP) — Thirteen years after the 9/11 terrorist attack, the resurrected World Trade Center is again opening for business — marking an emotional milestone for both New Yorkers and the nation.

Publishing giant Conde Nast will start moving Monday into One World Trade Center, a 104-story, $3.9 billion skyscraper that dominates the Manhattan skyline. It is America’s tallest building.

It’s the centerpiece of the 16-acre site where the decimated twin towers once stood and where more than 2,700 people died on Sept. 11, 2001, buried under smoking mounds of fiery debris.

"The New York City skyline is whole again, as One World Trade Center takes its place in Lower Manhattan," said Patrick Foye, executive director of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey that owns both the building and the World Trade Center site.

He said One World Trade Center "sets new standards of design, construction, prestige and sustainability; the opening of this iconic building is a major milestone in the transformation of Lower Manhattan into a thriving 24/7 neighborhood."

Police arrest multiple suspects in California hit-and-run that killed 3 girls on Halloween

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police in suburban Los Angeles say they've made multiple arrests in the hit-and-run deaths of three teenage girls who were trick-or-treating on Halloween, but few other details have been released.

Authorities in Santa Ana had been looking for the driver and another person who fled the scene of Friday evening's crash, which claimed the lives of 13-year-old twins and a 13-year-old friend at a crosswalk. A damaged black Honda SUV was found a short distance from where the collision occurred.

Santa Ana police said officers made the arrests Sunday, but declined to provide an exact number of arrests or other details ahead of a news conference scheduled for Monday.

A witness told the Los Angeles Times the girls were wearing costumes with black leggings and dark clothing when they were hit.

Two of the girls were declared dead immediately, and a third died as paramedics prepared to take her to a hospital, Orange County fire Capt. Steve Concialdi said.

Hong Kong police charge British banker suspected of killing 2 women

HONG KONG (AP) — Hong Kong police charged a British banker on Monday with killing two women, including an Indonesian whose body was found in a suitcase on the balcony of the man's upscale apartment, authorities said.

The killings have shocked Hong Kong, an Asian financial hub with a reputation as a safe city with a low rate of violent crime.

Rurik George Caton Jutting appeared briefly at a preliminary hearing at which he spoke only to confirm that he understood the two murder charges against him.

Police earlier said Jutting, 29, had called them to his apartment in Hong Kong's Wan Chai nightlife and red light district at 3:42 a.m. on Saturday.

Court documents listed his nationality as British and his occupation as a "banker of Bank of America." Jutting worked for the bank until recently, Bank of America Merrill Lynch spokesman Paul Scanlon said Sunday, without providing more details.

Sesame Street, longest-running kids' show in TV history, marks 45th birthday Nov. 10

NEW YORK (AP) — You don't get to be the longest-running children's show in TV history by doing the same thing over and over. So even though parents who grew up watching "Sesame Street" can still see old favorites like Big Bird, things on the street have changed since the show debuted 45 years ago on Nov. 10, 1969.

Groton Daily Independent

Monday, November 03, 2014 ♦ Vol. 17 - No. 105 ♦ 26 of 28

Cookie Monster now exercises self-control and sometimes eats fruits and vegetables. Millions of kids watch the show on phones and computers instead of TV. And there's less time spent on the street with human characters. They're just not energetic enough for today's viewers.

That "Sesame Street" still exists at all says a lot. In 1973, it was one of two TV shows for preschoolers. Now it's competing with 84 kids' shows on TV and countless others online. Yet "Sesame Street" still holds its own, ranking 20th among kids ages 2 to 5 with 850,000 viewers per TV episode, according to Sesame Workshop, the nonprofit organization behind the show.

But now half the viewers watch it in digital formats. Options include SesameStreet.org, PBSKids.org, Netflix, Amazon, iTunes and some 50 apps. A "Sesame Street" YouTube channel has a million subscribers and 1.5 billion views. And touchscreens have been "a magic wand for us in terms of engagement," says "Sesame Street" senior vice president Scott Chambers. Kids can trace letters or point to colors or shapes, and the app provides positive reinforcement.

"Sesame Street" also has the highest "co-viewing" experience — meaning adults watching with kids — of any preschool show: 49 percent of "Sesame Street" viewers are over age 18. "We're very proud of that," said Chambers. "We design the show to engage the parent because we know that's more educational. If you have a parent watching with you, you're going to learn much more."

AP PHOTOS: In Old Cairo, donkey barber brings beauty to beasts of burden

CAIRO (AP) — In the shadow of Cairo's medieval aqueduct, Mohamed Mustafa teaches his 5-year-old son the family's trade, one shear at a time.

Mohamed is one of Cairo's donkey barbers, an expert in trimming and styling horses, camels, mules, sheep, goats, dogs and donkeys. He is a third-generation qassasseen, the Egyptian Arabic term for animal barbers, and his grandfather worked in Cairo's Abdeen Palace.

Mohamed's father, Mahmoud, taught him the trade and now, near Old Cairo along the road following the aqueduct, he teaches the craft to his son Mustafa.

It is a profession often looked down upon in Egyptian society, as he works with the beasts of burden that still roam modern Cairo's streets, pulling carts filled with vegetables or loads of trash from neighborhoods. But workers rely on the animals and take pride in them, getting them haircuts or having their fur shaved with designs or their initials ahead of major holidays.

"There are a lot of other people who do this job. But he (Mohamed) is gentle — and his prices are gentle too," says Abdulrahman Ibrahim, a cart driver who stopped by Mohamed's outdoor shop to get his horse's monthly trim.

Thought for Today: "Among these things but one thing seems certain - that nothing certain exists, and that nothing is more pitiable or more presumptuous than man." - Pliny the Elder, Roman scholar.
