

Paul Kosel made the journey to the catwalk up on the water tower on Friday in an effort to get the "Show" lights back in operation. The bulbs were changed out, but that did not solve the problem. It was later discovered that a wire had been burned off and that new wire will have to be fished through the conduit to get the lights operational again. Looking down from where Paul is at is Dan Sunne doing some test on the power source on the tower.

2019 prom date changed

The original date for the prom in 2019 was April 13, which happened to correspond on the same date as the ACT testing in Groton. The Groton Area administration has been grappling with trying to separate the two. The first thing that got changed on the 2018-19 school calendar was spring break. The State A girls and boys basketball tournaments are now on the same weekend so spring break to changed to correspond with the state tournament on March 21 and 22. Prom got changed to April 27, 2019. The FCCLA Style show has been tentatively set for March 28. The FFA Banquet date is yet to be determined.

The 2018-19 MS/HS handbook was reviewed with a few changes presented by middle/high school principal, Kiersten Sombke. Some of the proposed changes given first reading includes eliminating the 1 percent reduction in grades due to absences. Vaping will be added to the smoking policy. There were changes to the personal technology consequences of misuse which now includes four violations instead of two. Items that need to be kept in the lockers are coats, jackets, hats, caps, lunch bags and backpacks.

The upcoming meeting for high school student athletes for fall athletics will be held July 30.

Lindsey Tietz gave a curriculum review for the FACs program. One thing she mentioned is that she will be requesting four new sewing machines at a cost of $449 each so she will have 14 machines available in her classes.

The resignation of Mary Johnson as MS/SS Language Arts Teacher was accepted and Kristi Anderson was re-assigned to fill that position. Lindsey DeHoet was hired as a kindergarten teacher, Emily Fischer was hired as a second grade teacher, and Mellissa Smith was hired as a third grade teacher. An ESY agreement for about $500 was approved for Todd Peterson. Melissa Ulmer was hired to man the elementary library.

Lane changes for the following were approved: Brooke Lingbeck from BS+15 to BS+30, Jan Seibel from BS+30 to BS+45, and Shaun Wanner from BS to BS+15.

Jeremy Weber and Drake Patterson were approved as volunteer boys' basketball coaches for the 2018-19 school year.

ADVERTISE IN NEWSPAPERS statewide for only $150. Put the South Dakota Statewide

Supporting the Hometown Newspaper

Chances are that if you are reading this, you subscribe to a local newspaper. Publications like this play an instrumental role in keeping communities strong and informed. Sadly, many are disappearing from our rural communities, making it increasingly difficult to stay connected with what's happening within the local school system, around town, and around the state.

The ever-increasing cost of production is one of the most common concerns South Dakota's newspapers raise with me. In recent years, new tariffs on Canadian newsprint have increased paper prices by 20 to 30 percent. That's significant. A paper that services around 20,000 customers, for instance, could see paper costs rise by about a quarter-million dollars annually, threatening the newspaper's survival.

As David Bordewyk, the Executive Director of the South Dakota Newspaper Association, told me: "I have already heard from South Dakota newspaper publishers who fear that if these tariffs were to carry forward indefinitely, they will very well be forced to close their doors. That creates a ripple effect in the community for businesses that rely on the local newspaper to advertise and promote their goods and services."

To help ease the burden, I introduced the PRINT Act in early June. This legislation places a temporary hold on the newsprint tariffs, giving time for the Commerce Department to investigate the negative impact the tariffs have on our hometown papers. As Bordewyk explains it: "This legislation will provide some breathing room and an opportunity for a more complete review and analysis."

The PRINT Act is the latest in a series of efforts to better support our local newspapers. During tax reform, many South Dakota newspapers reached out with concerns about a proposed "Ad Tax," which would have forced news organizations to pay taxes on advertising dollars. The impact of a tax like that would have been widespread and made it more expensive for local businesses to advertise their goods and services. In the end, we were able to stave off the proposed tax hike.

Even if you can mitigate costs, however, delivery can be a challenge. In recent years, the U.S. Postal Service has threatened to cut Saturday delivery, a move that would have dealt another devastating blow to the local newspaper industry, which relies heavily on consistent and reliable mail service. We successfully fought the measure and forced the Postal Service to create organizational efficiencies before cutting services to South Dakota families, newspapers, and businesses.

Today, South Dakota is home to more than 125 local newspapers. That's a number we need to protect. Their reporting reminds us the world is made of neighborhoods and shared experiences. It keeps us connected and strengthens our sense of community and connection. Thank you for supporting your local newspaper.

Weekly Vikings Roundup
By Jordan Wright

We have now hit week three of the yearly Minnesota Vikings roster breakdown. So far, we have covered the quarterback, running back and fullback positions. This week, we attempt to tackle the wide receiver position.

As the roster currently sits, there are 12 wide receivers battling it out for five or six roster spots. The Vikings boast one of the best wide receiver groups in the entire NFL. The position has certainly gone from lackluster to envious in just a couple seasons, primarily because of the emergence of Adam Thielen and Stefon Diggs.

Adam Thielen led the Vikings in targets (143), receptions (91), receiving yards (1,276) and catches of 20-yards or more (20). His 1,276 yards were fifth in the NFL, which led to Thielen earning his first Pro Bowl invite. He is signed through the 2020 season and has a starting spot guaranteed. Hopefully he will hit pay dirt more often in 2018, as he was only in the endzone four times last year (third on the team).

Stefon Diggs missed two games last season because of injury but was still second on the team in targets (95), receptions (64) and receiving yards (849). He also led the Minnesota receivers with eight touchdown catches. He will undoubtedly be the other starting WR in 2018, although if he wants to take his game to the next level he will need to stay healthy (he has yet to play a full 16-games in a season). Diggs is also entering the last year of his contract, so I expect a contract extension to be finalized sometime between now and the start of the season.

Laquon Treadwell's 20 catches for 200 yards is good for the third highest stats of the Vikings' receivers last year. Entering his third year in the NFL, the former first-round pick has been labeled by many as a "bust". However, after watching the film I saw a huge jump from year one to year two. There were way too many times when he was open and wasn't even looked at, which is partly due to who is in front of him in the pecking order (Thielen, Diggs, Kyle Rudolph) and partly because Case Keenum rarely made it past his first or second reads on any given play. With another year under his belt, and a new quarterback behind center, I expect big things from Treadwell this year.

Last season, only five Vikings' wide receivers caught a pass. If Thielen, Diggs and Treadwell have a roster spot locked up, that leaves the remaining players fighting it out for the last two or three spots.

Jeff Badet - an undrafted rookie from Oklahoma. He is athletic and can return kicks, but has inconsistent hands and will be lucky to get a practice squad spot.

Chad Beebe - another undrafted rookie, this time from Northern Illinois. I couldn't find much film on him, but my best guess is he is just a camp body who will need to make a career shift this fall.

Stacy Coley - a seventh-round draft pick of the Vikings in 2017. Coley played in four games last year but didn't have a catch and only had one kick return (19 yards). He has a good shot to make the final roster.

Cayleb Jones - was on the Vikings' practice squad last season but will be hard pressed to make it back because he is suspended the first four games of the 2018 season for violating the NFL's performance enhancing drugs policy.

Tavarres King - drafted in the fifth-round of the 2013 draft by the Denver Broncos. After bouncing around from team to team, he has landed in Minnesota. Over the past two seasons with the New York Giants, he amassed 20 catches for 290 yards (while also adding three catches for 73 yards and a touchdown in the Giants' 2016 playoff game). He has a strong chance to make the Vikings' final 53-man roster.

Korey Robertson - undrafted rookie from Southern Mississippi. He isn't very athletic, but plays with strength and can out-muscle smaller cornerbacks. He is another camp body with a very small chance to make the practice squad.

Jake Wieneke - undrafted rookie from South Dakota State. He is the tallest receiver on the Vikings' roster at 6'4". While he isn't the fastest receiver, he has great body control and has shown the ability to adjust in mid air to make contested catches. He also seems to show up when the lights are the brightest, so I'm surely not going to count him out of at least making the Vikings' practice squad.

Kendall Wright - entering his seventh NFL season. He is very similar to Jarius Wright and will likely fulfill that role on the Vikings. He has a very good chance to make the final roster unless there is a cheaper, younger option who the team feels comfortable with.

Brandon Zylstra - played at Concordia-Moorhead before heading to the Canadian Football League. He led the CFL last season with 1,687 yards and five touchdowns on 100 catches. He's shown the ability to produce, now he will need to show he can do it in the NFL. Strong practice squad candidate.
