First draft of 2019-20 school year calendar presented

The first draft of the 2019-20 school year calendar was presented to the Groton Area School Board Monday evening. It has a starting date of August. 22. Superintendent Joe Schwan noted that Native American Day on October 14 is currently a school day due to the fact that there are parent-teacher conferences that Thursday and school in-service that Friday. Christmas vacation that school year is proposed from December 23 through January 3.

The school report card is now available on-line at sdschools.sd.gov. Schwan said so far everything looks good for the district. He noted anyone going to the website should be aware that the district is broken down into three different schools - elementary, middle and high school.

Police Chief Stacy Mayou brought in posters that could be hung around the school explaining the hazards of vaping.

The football schedules are expected to be out in February. Schwan said he is requesting to keep Ellendale-Edgley-Kulm. Webster will be moving back up to 11 man so Groton Area would be able to pick them up on the schedule and dropping one of the further away teams. Sioux Valley and Miller are also options for pickup.

Middle/High School Principal Kiersten Sombke explained a number of items with the dual credit program. The board gave second reading to allow seniors to pick up four classes per semester of dual credit classes. In addition, a student can only get up to nine credits of dual credit and if they go over that amount, they have to complete a petition for the extra credits.

Schwan reported on the governor's budget address, but added it will be up to the new governor for the upcoming budget. He said he expects Gov. Elect Noem to be more conservative than Dugaard. The budget proposal has a 2.3 percent increase in aid to education.

A request to use two school buses for caroling by the youth groups of Emmanuel Lutheran Church and the United Methodist Church was approved and the board waived the mileage charge. Last year, the group went to 20 households in addition to Rosewood Court and Groton Care and Rehab.

Native American schools consider football conference

By Dana Hess

For the S.D. Newspaper Association

PIERRE —Native American schools in South Dakota are considering forming their own high school football conference.

The conference would be separate from the South Dakota High School Activities Association. The SDHSAA board learned about the proposed All Nations Football Conference at its October meeting on Wednesday.

SDHSAA Executive Director Dan Swartos said the schools are considering the conference in an effort to rebuild their football teams.

"They're trying to do something to get numbers back up in their programs," Swartos said.

Lower Brule head football coach Zeke Prado told the board it was hard to get players to go out for his team when they looked at the schedule and saw that they would face powerhouse teams like Parkston, Bon Homme and Potter County.

Prado said the idea for the conference is an attempt to get "our students the best football experience."

The board saw a proposal for the conference from Lower Brule Superintendent Lance Witte. In the proposal Witte noted that in the 36 years of the SDHSAA football playoffs, a tribal school has never won a state championship.

According to the Witte, the proposal calls for east and west conferences. Teams in the west conference could include Eagle Butte, Little Wound, Crazy Horse, Red Cloud, Pine Ridge and Takini. The east conference could include teams from Crow Creek, Flandreau Indian School, Tiospa Zina, Lower Brule, St. Francis and McLaughlin.

Teams would play an eight-game regular season schedule between Sept. 30 and Nov. 9. Eight teams would be eligible for three weeks of post-season play culminating with a championship game at the Dakota Dome at the University of South Dakota.

"I love the notion that you're trying to get kids involved in activities," said SDHSAA Board Chairman Brian Maher of Sioux Falls.

Even though the proposed conference would be separate from SDHSAA, its existence would have some bearing on the association. Swartos said the association would need figure out how its eligibility standards meshed with the new conference, work out how to schedule officials and decide if the catastrophic insurance purchased by SDHSAA for member schools would apply.

Maher, who came to Sioux Falls from a position at a school in Nebraska, said that for years six-man football in that state was not affiliated with the state's activities association.

"There may be some lessons learned there," Maher said.

Prado acknowledged that there is plenty of work to do before January's SDHSAA board meeting. That's when football conferences are aligned.

Board member Steve Morford of Spearfish noted that the schools interested in the proposed conference impact every football division except for AAA.

"I think there's some real opportunity here," Maher said. "You've got a lot of work to do."

Recruiting officials, tournament costs on SDHSAA agenda

PIERRE — The South Dakota High School Activities Association Board of Directors set some goals at its planning session in August. The board got to work on those goals at its October meeting on Wednesday.

The board wants to develop a strategy for the recruitment and retention of officials and coaches.

"Everybody is in the same boat," said SDHSAA Assistant Executive Director Jo Auch, referring on a midwest officials' summit she attended.

According to Auch, ideas offered at the summit included a thank a ref program designed to bring attention to work that officials do at games.

"That has worked very well in some states," Auch said.

Another program, "Battlefields to Ballfields," sought to get veterans involved in officiating.

"What better leadership do we have?" Auch asked.

SDHSAA will also try to have a booth at a state event geared toward recruiting officials.

Meade School District Activities Director Todd Palmer said he thought schools could add officiating to their curriculum so students could get the training they needed to officiate at lower level games.

SDHSAA Executive Director Dan Swartos said the staff will have a report ready for the board by the April or June meeting in 2019.

The staff will also be gathering information to get a better handle on the costs schools face when they host regional or state tournaments.

Swartos said this would be an effort "to make it more equitable to our site hosts."

While gathering the information, Swartos noted that the staff won't always be comparing apples to apples. He said some school districts get funding from their local visitors' bureau while others do not. Some spend as much as $2,000 on hospitality while others spend nothing.

The third board goal was developing a process for evaluating Swartos. How he will be evaluated was the topic of an executive session after Wednesday's meeting. Swartos will have his evaluation after the January 2019 meeting.
