

Pierce Kettering likes hands-on experience at Rutgear605

by Dorene Nelson

Groton Area High School offers a variety of business classes. One of these classes, School Internships, offers seniors the opportunity to work in various local businesses of their choice.

The purpose of this internship is to teach students responsibility by working for someone other than their family. It helps them learn how to work with the public and with customers who might not be all that agreeable at times.

Internships could also help students decide on a part-time job while they are in college or maybe even to help them choose a future occupation.

The business teacher, Becky Hubsch, has set up this experience for the seventeen students enrolled in her School Internship class.

All students must be at their chosen place of work during their Internship class. There are two separate sections of Internship classes this year. The student interns must contact the place they would like to work and have their own personal transportation.

Pierce Kettering, son of Kara and Kevin Pharis and Scott Kettering, is interning first semester at Rutgear 605. He has two sisters and two brothers.

"I participate in football and baseball," Kettering listed. "I also plan to go out for wrestling this year."

"I chose to work here for Justin Hanson and Jeremy Weber," he smiled, "because I know both of them and really enjoy working here with them."

"There are other places I could have selected, but I prefer hands-on work," Kettering admitted. "The work can be difficult and challenging, but I'm learning how to do it with fewer problems."

"The best part of this job is seeing the improvements as I learn more about the work of putting together towers for deer blinds," he explained. "One of the first towers we put together was leaning to one side, and that's not good!"

"The towers arrive here in pieces, with labels and directions on how to put it together," Kettering stated. "But just because it's labeled and has clear directions doesn't mean the tower will stand up straight!"

"Following high school graduation, I plan to attend Lake Area Technical College and major in Precision Agriculture," he said. "While in Watertown, I also intend to get instruction and training to get a private pilot's license."

Roundtable meeting set for November 15th

The Groton City Council met Tuesday evening where it was announced that there will be a Groton Residential Development Roundtable Meeting on November 15th at noon at the Groton Community Center. Casey Crabtree, Heartland Consumer Power District's Director of Economic Development, will be the guest speaker.

Todd Gay, Groton Electric Superintendent, came before the council to talk about some requested adjustments. He requested that the hours for the department be from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. with a half hour break. Gay said those hours work better for a family life. He also requested that the electric department get time and a half pay when being called out after hours, and he requested that the electric lineman wage be adjusted because other areas around Groton pay higher for the same position. The council agreed to the temporary change in hours, which will be reviewed at the first meeting in December.

The council authorized the mayor to sign the Funding Agreement with the State of South Dakota Department of Transportation for a runway project at the Groton Airport. The airport has seen a number of improvements with more on the way.

Weekly Vikings Roundup

By Jack & Duane Kolsrud

The Dallas Cowboy fans travel well and makeup about 20% of the fans at US Bank Stadium on Sunday Night Football. That makes the loss to the Cowboys much more painful as they leave with another excruciating loss late in the game.

Once again, the Vikings looked great on their opening drive. They get a jump-start in the game by scoring an impressive 75-yard drive culminating in a touchdown. The problem was they would go silent the rest of the way. In the end, Dallas prevails in a 20-16 defensive battle.

First Half:

The Vikings take the opening kick 75 yards, with Adam Thielen scoring on a 20-yard pass over the middle from Kirk Cousins. Dallas mounted a drive but missed a long field. Dallas comes back in the 2nd quarter to cut the lead 7-3 on a 38-yard field goal by Greg Zuerlein. The Vikings match that kick with Greg Joseph's 45-yard field goal with 1:49 left in the first half. Overall the first half was pretty quiet except for the 20% Cowboy fans that showed up for the game.

Second Half:

The 2nd started with a bang. On just the third play after the kickoff, the Cowboy's backup quarterback, Cooper Rush, hit Ced Wilson over the middle, and he outran the Viking defensive backs for a quick 73-yard touchdown. All of a sudden, the game is tied 10-10.

After the teams exchanged punts, the Vikings managed a seven-play drive ending in a 40-yard field goal. The Cowboys quickly respond with a 39-yard field goal to tie the game at 13.

The fourth quarter was quiet until the final 3 minutes. The Vikings, with the help of three personal foul penalties, managed to get the ball down inside the red zone and kick a 24-yard field goal to take the lead with 2:51 to go.

Now is when the heartbreak starts to happen. In shades of Antonio Freeman's catch on MNF against the Vikings, Amari Cooper catches a well-defended tip ball for a 33-yard catch to put the Cowboys in Viking territory. The Cowboys drive into the red zone, when on third down and 11, Ezekial Elliot, who is kept in check for most of the game, catches a short pass and busts two tackles to get a first down inside the 10. On the very next play, Rush tosses a fade to Cooper in the back left corner of the endzone. The Cowboys take a 20-16 lead. The Vikings manage to get to midfield, but time expires. The Vikings fall to 3-4 on the season.

Statistical Leaders:

Kirk Cousins 22 for 35, 184 yards, 1 TD pass
Dalvin Cook 18 carries for 178 yards rushing, 0 TD
Adam Thielen 6 catches for 78 yards, 1 TD

The highlights of the day:

Former Cowboy Xavier Woods had his best game as a Viking picking off a pass in the first half and causing a fumble on a sack in the second half.

The irony of the day:

CJ Ham, known for his blocking prowess as a fullback, caught more passes than Justin Jefferson on the night. It is not a recipe for success if the Vikings want to save this season from implosion.

Next game: at Baltimore Ravens

Righting the ship is not getting any easier for this Vikings team as they travel to Baltimore to face Lamar Jackson and the Ravens. The next three weeks will determine the fate of this team and possibly the tenure of Mike Zimmer as they play three of the best quarterbacks in the league.

Endurance of the stoics

The calendar reads November. How'd that happen? One minute the bars are overflowing with Halloween costumes—sexy nurse, sexy cop, sexy town drunk—and the next thing you know turkeys are running for their lives.

The great country singer Roger Miller, who philosophized, "You Can't Roller Skate in a Buffalo Herd," said he grew up in a town so small, they didn't even have a town drunk. "We had to take turns."

It's kinda that way with Frederick, SD, where I grew up, only we take turns being the town writer. It started with the late great Dick Pence, who it seemed, was fiction, because I always just heard about him or just missed him—never actually witnessed him.

We finally had "The Great Summit" about 20 years ago with a six-pack under the water tower. Dick passed the baton to me, smacked me over the head with it, metaphorically, and now there's a new kid, Lance Nixon, who I'm pretty sure wants my damn baton. If we grew up in a bigger town, we'd have more batons.

Lance reached out to me last week looking for some thoughts on the differences and similarities between the two Dakotas for an article he's writing for some high highfalutin' magazine, which I dutifully pecked out on my phone in the dentist's waiting room and in the chair between tortures. I'm not going to reveal too much of what I said; you'll have to pay Lance for the work I did by buying the magazine. In case I said anything controversial, I'd like to preemptively denounce Lance and the magazine for misquoting me. Besides, I was hopped up on Novocaine.

It was a good exercise to think about who we are. In two words: enduring stoics. In one: maniacs. As I sit here, having fallen asleep in my sexy Danny DeVito costume, I am where I dreaded I'd be. No, not the third-best writer in Frederick, rather at the dining room table with a laptop, having been up for 90 minutes while it's still black as a lawyer's heart outside.

I fought it every inch of the way. This year, I wrote outside at sunrise and sunset, in searing heat, in drizzle, through mosquitoes, and in perfect weather with a pug rolling in the grass beneath my feet. You drink it in, guzzle it down, because winter is inevitable. I know that because I got a call from Britton, SD, wondering if they should service my stand-by generator, which indeed, sometimes stands by when it should be doing other things. I misheard them when I bought it. I thought they said "auto-start," when in fact it was "ought to start."

I also know winter's coming because subscribers are coming in with their change of address. I've abandoned all pretense of objectivity. I just tell them to their faces that I resent them. "Fine, leave me here to deal with your winter. You think you're so smart. Just like Lance Nixon. I hope you get a sunburn."

Once we've finished flipping off the snowbirds, we settle into our stoic endurance. Frostbite ain't so bad, we tell ourselves, and moving tons of snow out of the driveway gives you a sense of accomplishment until the wind changes and you have to do it again.

Have I cheered you up, yet? Oh, get over it. There you lie on the couch passed out in your sexy nurse outfit while Lance Nixon and I've been slaving away trying to get other people to do our work for us, and let me tell you something, Bob, next time shave your legs.

I know it's over because I finally made myself roll up the hoses this weekend, all the while cursing that I signed a contract for the pipeline when it's clear to me I have enough hose to connect to a spigot in Bismarck myself.

I put away the "zero gravity" outdoor recliner that was grounded up against the fence along with some tumbleweeds. I also dragged in half a dozen planters which I have no room for, but after nursing those plants along all summer, I'm not letting them die. Theoretically, I should put them out in the spring, but I won't. I'll just buy new ones, and eventually, there will be so many oxygen-producing plants in my house it will become a hazard, and one spark will make it look like a Die Hard movie.

This is the part, according to standard column-writing formula, where I write something uplifting and meaningful. Well, it's 20 degrees outside with an expected high of 36. But in two months that'll seem like a heatwave. You're welcome.

Kids: color stuff in!

In 1803, President Thomas Jefferson and Congress wanted to learn about the western part of the country. They gave money to me, Second Lieutenant William Clark and Captain Meriwether Lewis to lead an expedition to the west. Our job was to:

- find a water route to the Pacific Ocean for trading
- map the "new" territory
- learn about the Native Americans we met along the route
- study plants and animals

Read the clues to fill in the crossword.

1. President Thomas _____, our 3rd President, wanted a group to travel and map the route.
2. _____ and Clark became co-commanders of the "Lewis and Clark Expedition."
3. The men prepared for the trip by doing research, buying _____ and having a keelboat built.
4. In May 1804 they began their _____ in a keelboat and two pirogues (flat-bottomed rowboats).
5. The group traveled about 15-20 miles a day. They met fur traders and peaceful _____ tribes.
6. In the fall of 1804, to get ready for _____, they built Fort Mandan near Indian villages.
7. They added a trapper to be an interpreter. His Shoshone wife, _____, pointed out landmarks and helped them talk with the Native Americans they met. She had a baby boy in 1805.
8. In March, when the _____ on the river broke, the group split and went in two different directions.
9. They met the Shoshone people, who told them to travel on land and sold them _____.
10. As they traveled, the group kept _____, logs of the animals, plants and people and made maps.
11. _____ became very hard through thick woods and bitter cold and snow. The group was forced to eat three of their horses. They met the Nez Perce Indians who fed them and saved their lives.
12. They traveled on the _____, again finding it very rough. They were battered by storms.
13. The group settled in for the winter in _____. They built a fort called Fort Clatsop.
14. During the winter, they prepared for their return trip. They got back to _____ on Sept. 23, 1806.
15. The group had traveled over 8,000 _____ in 28 months through what would become 11 states.

EARTHTALK

Dear EarthTalk: Should we all be ditching our gas stoves in favor of electric models? -- Mary R., San Francisco, CA

Walking into your kitchen to make dinner appears relatively simple with a gas-powered stove readily available to cook your every desire. But while rotating the switch to turn on a gas stove, most people do not consider its health and environmental implications. According to a University of California Los Angeles (UCLA) report, over 90 percent of gas-powered appliances in California residences emit toxic pollutants such as carbon monoxide (CO), nitrogen oxides (NOx), particulate matter and formaldehyde.

While gas furnaces and water heaters are big polluters no doubt, most of them are vented outdoors and are thus sending their CO and NOx emissions outside. But pollution from stoves and ovens are released indoors. The UCLA researchers found that in nine out of ten residences surveyed where gas ovens or stoves were in use, peak levels of nitrogen dioxide (NO2) inside the kitchen after cooking for one hour surpassed both state and national outdoor acute air quality standards. Such high concentrations of indoor air pollution are even more dangerous for smaller households—peak levels of NO2 in 98 percent of apartments surveyed exceeded state and national air quality standards.

Such pollution from gas-fired appliances like furnaces, water heaters and stoves present a serious health threat, increasing the likelihood of respiratory illness, cardiovascular disease and premature death. For the elderly and children who are more susceptible to infections and diseases, elevated NO2 levels can be especially toxic. Additional risks of cooking with gas include increased risk of lung disease and vulnerability to novel viruses, not to mention the prompting of new allergies. Children risk a decreased IQ, learning deficits and asthma. In fact, a 2013 report analyzing the impacts of indoor NO2 from gas stoves found that children who grew up in a home with a gas stove are 42 percent more likely to develop asthma than those who didn't.

Gas stoves are also a source of carbon monoxide, a pollution that is fatal at extremely high concentrations and can cause headaches, dizziness, vomiting and nausea. Though morbidity linked to accidental CO is quite low, frequent exposure can increase the risk of lethal heart disease.

To avoid such health and environmental setbacks, gas appliances can be replaced by any number of zero-emission electric alternatives. The most common and effective stoves to replace gas stoves are induction cooktops and modern electric stoves. Electric stoves are powered by thermal conduction whereby electricity runs through a set of coils; induction cooktops are powered by electromagnetic currents that directly heat the cookware. Though initial installation costs of electric or induction stoves can be quite high, they consume much less energy than gas stoves and thus are more cost-effective in the long run.

If you are concerned about the health implications of indoor air pollution, maybe it's time to go electric in the kitchen.

When the Heart Can't Keep Up

A woman had been feeling short of breath for several weeks. Physical activities which had previously been easy for her were becoming a chore. In fact, simply laying down resulted in difficulty breathing. She had gained some weight and her legs were swollen.

This woman was a patient of mine, and she was in heart failure. This doesn't necessarily mean her heart was going to completely stop, but it was having trouble keeping up. For whatever reason, her heart struggled to pump, and fluid was building up in her body adding more strain. It was a vicious circle, and it was getting worse.

After listening to her story, I completed a physical examination, and ordered a few tests. Then, I talked to my patient about heart failure. We agreed she would take medication to help her heart pump better and fluid pills to help decrease the swelling.

Heart failure is often triggered by some type of damage affecting the heart's ability to pump. Heart damage might result from a sudden heart attack blocking blood flow in an artery of the heart. Sometimes damage occurs slowly, blocking blood flow due to the gradual buildup of cholesterol known as coronary artery disease. Other causes of heart failure may include faulty heart valves, an irregular heart rhythm, high blood pressure, smoking, diabetes, or obesity.

Myocarditis, or inflammation of the heart, can also lead to heart failure. Often temporary, myocarditis can be the result of a virus or other infections, drugs, chemicals, and other diseases.

Sometimes the reason for heart failure may be a lung problem. The heart pumps blood through the lungs and back to the heart, then out through the body. So, if the blood is not flowing through the lungs efficiently, the heart can have trouble. Thus, a blood clot in the lungs, smoking, vaping, cancer, infection, or other lung problems can also lead to heart failure.

I recently saw my patient again, and she feels great. She rarely experiences shortness of breath anymore. She faithfully takes the medications and keeps an eye on her weight and her diet, but other than that, she does not think much about it.

If you are experiencing increased shortness of breath with activity, swelling of the legs, an unusual increase in weight, increased fatigue, chest pain, or if you feel like your heart is beating too quickly or not in a regular manner, please see your doctor. Your heart works hard so you can keep up your activities. Please make sure you return the favor.
