GHS Students do internships by Dorene Nelson

Groton Area High School offers a variety of business classes. One of these classes, School Internships, offers seniors the opportunity to work in various local businesses of their choice.

The purpose of this internship is to teach students responsibility by working for someone other than their family. It helps them learn how to work with the public and with customers who might not be all that agreeable at times.

Internships could also help students decide on a part-time job while they are in college or maybe even to help them choose a future occupation.

The business teacher, Becky Hubsch, has set up this experience for the students enrolled in her School Internship class.

All students must be at their chosen place of work during the first period of the school day. The student interns must contact the place they would like to work and have their own personal transportation.

Marzahn at Bierman Farm Service

Andrew Marzahn, son of Wade and Renee Marzahn, is interning at Bierman Farm Service. "I've done inventory, cleaning, and sweeping, the kind of work my father does at his own seed business," Andrew explained.

"Sometimes the work required can be a dirty, dusty job like the cleaning of grain augers that are a few different ways to clean out an auger, the best and safest method is by using a good air compressor." "Dirty or not, this is an important job for both seed company owners and for farmers," Marzahn smiled! "Smooth and easy handling of seed plays a large part a successful farm industry." "Today I am taking inventory of how many gallons of liquid RoundUp is on hand in the warehouse," he explained. "I have to look carefully at the labels since they are not all exactly the same." "I really like this business where you set your own schedule," he stated. "The physical labor can be hard, but I don't mind hard work!" "I participate in football, golf, and track," Marzahn listed. "After I graduate from high school, I plan to attend either SDSU, majoring in the agricultural field, or South Dakota School of mines, to become an industrial engineer."

Thirteen Middle School Band Students Participate at the Northwestern Middle School Music Festival

Middle School students from Groton and fifteen area schools participated in the Northwestern Middle School Music Festival on Tuesday October 11th in Mellette. The students rehearsed with guest directors and performed a concert that was open to the public that same evening.

Thirteen students were selected to play in the Festival Band. The band students are selected from nomination forms filled out by each school's director. Groton was the school that had the highest number of students in the band.

Eighth graders Carlee Johnson, Teagan Hanten, Blake Lord, and Brody Lord were recognized as three-year members of this event. Carlee was the first chair horn section leader, and Blake was the first chair tuba section leader.

The festival band was directed by Mr. Jason Groon. Groon is the current 9-12 Director of Bands for the Harrisburg School District and is a member of the SD National Guard 147th Army Band. Groon has been a music educator for nineteen years and has been honored with the "Young Director Award" and "50 Directors Who Make a Difference Report."

A primer: talking about cancer

"You're wasting away," a friend blurted the my esophagus, I had an other day and probably regretted it immediately as much as I did. For my part, I feel suddenly obligated to divulge things that frankly, I'm weary talking about.

Statistically, one in three people get cancer, so I decided as part of that large minority, I should provide a brief primer for friends and neighbors, who, aside from a few busy-bodies and gossips, truly do care.

First of all, according to an insurance weight table I once read, at 200 pounds I'm 45 pounds over my optimum weight. Heck, when I was running everyday and had a 28-inch waist, I weighed 168. Let's worry when the insurance worry worts and morbidly-interested. Basically, companies are happy.

my scans are clean and my doctor calls me in favor of other proteins. I love fruits, and I a "walking miracle." I attribute that to worldclass treatment, prayers, many from people who don't really even know me, and positive thinking on my part.

One comment didn't send me off to the keyboard. It's the accumulation, and honestly, it's generational. Oldsters say things like, "When I saw your new picture for your column, I said, 'That's not Tony!'" Or, "You don't look like yourself!" Whoa. Don't I get to decide what I look like, with of course, acceptance of Father Time and life's inevitable scars?

Occasionally, some old fart demands I deliver my own personal HIPA violation and then regales me with a list of everyone they knew who died of cancer during their Methuselah lifespan. Inspiring. Well, old-timer, cancer isn't Preservatives. Now, check your pantry. Yeah, a death sentence; there've been tremendous I just ate a brat loaded with things I can't advances in chemotherapy, radiation, and immunotherapy.

I was diagnosed exactly two years ago and told my kids, "Don't research the statistics. I 'm not a statistic. If anyone's going to beat this, it's me."

I told my primary physician recently I planned to die of something else, and we settled on a boating accident at 95 with a bevy of bikiniclad women. When I told my oncologist that he looked startled. "Don't worry," I said. "None of the girls get hurt."

After the diagnosis—I remember my doctor and nurse were more shook up than I was, God bless 'em—I wrote myself a note that's been hanging on my refrigerator door since:

"You Will because you Can. "You Can because you Will."

After chemo and radiation to reduce the tumor at the bottom of esophagectomy to remove most of the esophagus and rebuild it with healthy stomach tissue, leaving me with very little stomach capacity, so to maintain my 247 pounds at the time of my diagnosis, I'd need 3,000 calories a day with a limit each meal of what fits in the palm of my hand.

HIC That's Life by Tony Bender

This bores me to tears, but let's placate the

I had involuntary stomach reduction surgery. Secondly, I feel great, and I should because It's tougher to digest meats so I limit them could pound ice cream everyday to hit 3,000 calories, but I like my A1C numbers where they are and my blood pressure's that of a 20-year-old. It requires balance.

Younger friends inevitably say, "You look great!" (Not that I recommend the diet plan.) It's generational. Not that older folks are mean. Many are just matter-of-fact bordering on insensitive. But younger folks can be more judgmental, to affix responsibility for the cancer. Mine's a result of acid-reflux-who knew that could happen—but since I enjoy fine wine and a quality cigar—quality over quantity—they just assume that Facebook photo is me 24/7.

You know another link to esophageal cancer? pronounce. I didn't fight through this ordeal to become a vegetarian monk.

So what's my advice to approaching someone dealing with cancer? Practice this sentence: "How are you doing?" If it's me, I'll say, "Fantastic," and mean it. But there's an opening to share more if I chose.

All cancer survivor look over their shoulders even without reminders, but it makes one pretty good at looking ahead, too, at appreciating every minute you have with those you love.

Cancer offers perspective and personal evolution, a borderline blessing. That mindset demands positivity. Give us that. We don't have to even discuss it. My life revolves around other things. Cancer's just another hurdle. Let's talk about the weather. Or my new boat. © Tony Bender, 2022

Weekly Vikings Recap -Week 6

By Jack & Duane Kolsrud

If you're a fan of punting, this was the game for you. For yet another week, the Vikings win despite not playing even close to their best game. Remarkably, the Vikings were outgained by a total of 224 yards by a Miami Dolphins team without their starting guarterback. Despite a 5-1 record now, it still feels like we are not sure how good this Vikings team can be.

In the first half, the Vikings' offense could not have gotten off to a worse start to begin the game by going three-and-out on their first four drives. Coming into the game, the Dolphins' defense was last in the league in forcing three-and-outs but somehow were able to completely fluster the Vikings' offense. Thanks to several penalties, the Dolphins were unable to capitalize on any of their opportunities, ultimately scoring only 3 points in the first half.

When the Vikings' offense got the ball to start their fifth drive, things started to change. For the first time all game, the Vikings were able to get a first down and the offense seemed like it started to click. In only six plays, they drove down the field to the Dolphins' 1-yard line. On the very next play, the Vikings ran a play-action pass, leading to Kirk Cousins finding a wide-open Irv Smith Jr in the back of the endzone for a touchdown.

As the first half was coming to an end, things started to not go the Dolphins' way. Dolphins' starting quarterback Skylar Thompson, who performed fairly well today, hurt his throwing hand after hitting a Vikings helmet and missed the rest of the game. Then, former Vikings QB Teddy Bridgewater, came into the game to replace Thompson and threw an untimely interception to Harrison Smith. The INT allowed the Vikings to get the ball into field goal range, setting up a Greg Joseph kick as time expired in the first half. After looking mediocre at best, the Vikings somehow had a 10-3 lead heading into halftime.

The second half was a repeat of the first half for both teams. Both the Dolphins and Vikings combined for seven straight threeand-outs and an unimpressive one total yard to start the half. But just like in the first half, the Vikings were able to put together a sevenplay touchdown drive. This time Kirk Cousins threaded the needle to Adam Thielen in the back of the endzone to give the Vikings a 16-3 lead. However, Greg Joseph missed the extra point, which caused a surge of anxiety in the heart of every Viking fan.

After a quick touchdown drive by the Dolphins to cut the Vikings' lead to 16-10, the Vikings went three-and-out for the ninth time in the game, giving the ball back to the Dolphins with a chance to win. As the Dolphins started to move into Viking's territory, it appeared that we would have yet another Vikings' game coming down to the wire. However, the Vikings' defense had other thoughts. First, Harrison Smith forced a fumble on Javlen Waddle, And, after an impressive Dalvin Cook 53-yard run that gave the Vikings a 24-10 lead, Patrick Peterson picked off Teddy Bridgewater to secure the victory for the Vikings. Thanks to a garbage time touchdown by the Dolphins, the final score came out as Vikings 24 - Dolphins 16. The star of the game had to be the Vikings' pass rush as they dominated the Dolphins' offensive line to a total of six sacks. Za'Darius Smith, in particular, was a force to be reckoned with today as he seemed to be in the backfield almost every play. Although a total of two sacks is a good stat to have, it does not do justice to how impressive he was against the Dolphins. Now, the Vikings head into their bye week with a two-game lead over the Green Bay Packers in the NFC North division. Although an early by eweek is not always the best thing for a team, hopefully, the Vikings can use the extra week to get their offense back on track to what it should be.

TIONS: Dana Siefkes Lewis with Summit Carbon Solution introduced herself to the Commission and stated she is an Advocate for the residents of Brown and Spink County. There are 200 Ethanol plants and 70 of those will be on this pipeline. Aaron Eldridge, Project Manager with Summit Carbon Solutions discussed the process for laying the pipeline, and they are going a foot deeper than required and the testing they put the pipes through look-ing for any leaks. He shared here will be 4 pump stations that will be inside shelters and have Cellular & Radio access. They must follow the route that they submitted to PUC for their permit. They are compensating landowners; landowners don't need to increase insurance. If a landowner has Drain Tile and repairs are needed, they have a company that will repair for the lifetime of the project, or they will compensate landowners if they have another contract. Landowners will have permanent easement but can not plant any trees or something with roots over the structure but can build next to it. They will try to go around shelter belts but that is not always possible. Landown-ers will be compensated for lose on crops for 3 years and after that if crops in that area are not producing as well as the rest of the crops – they will pay the difference on yields for lifetime of the project. Commissioner Feickert asked for a list of inves-tors, and they stated they can't give them everyone, only those that allow them to share their information – one of them is based out of South Korea. LOCAL ASSISTANCE & TRIBAL CONSISTENCY FUNDS: Moved by Feickert, seconded by Gage to approve applying for the Local ssistance & Tribal Consistency Funds (LATCF) funds from the U.S. Treasury. Dear EarthTalk: How do manufactured homes stack up against traditionally constructed houses in terms of energy efficiency and overall environmental footprint?

-- Jen Jackson, via email

As one might expect, manufactured homes run the gamut with regard to energy efficiency. In an analysis completed by the American Council for an Energy Efficient Economy (ACEEE), it was found that modern manufactured homes used 70.4 MM btu/year, a significant amount less than the 108.5 MM btu/year average seen in traditional, or "sitebuilt" homes.

In addition, the actual manufacture of manufactured homes produces much less waste, as does the on-site setup. According to the Manufactured Housing Association of British Columbia, the construction and set-up of manufactured homes creates 50 to 70 percent less waste than traditional home-building.

to different sites throughout the year. This approach is far less organized and efficient than the streamlined factory process associated with manufactured homes. As a result, all kinds of emissions are produced. In an indepth report commissioned by the Sturgeon Foundation of Alberta, Canada, carbon dioxide building projects were compared. It was determined that the on-site construction process produced a whopping 43 percent more CO2 emissions!

According to ACEEE, those who lived in a manufactured home before 1976 "spent more money on their energy bills than on home loans" and spent double on energy per square foot than those who occupied a traditional home. How is this possible? Before 1976, manufactured homes were built more quickly, for less money and with far less regard for energy efficiency. By June of that year, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) devised and implemented the HUD Code, setting a higher standard in quality, safety and efficiency of product.

Today, manufactured homes must have sufficient levels of insulation (this includes around ductwork, electrical outlets, lighting, etc.), modern water heaters and energy-efficient appliances. If the manufactured home does not meet the minimum standards set out by HUD, then it is illegal for it to be sold, leased or rented to anybody.

That being said, if you happen to own a Traditional home-building also requires that manufactured home that was purchased the materials, tools and workers all be sent before 1976, there are still many ways that you can upgrade your pad-from-the-past to meet the energy demands of the modern age. Passive solar design is one such avenue, whereby manufactured home-owners orient and design their home space to maximize the amount of sun exposure. This will not only power any solar panels that may have been (CO2) emissions of both modular and on-site installed more efficiently, it will also provide both natural light and heat.

Using a solar water heater is another great way to reduce one's energy expenditures. Though roof-mounted options may be limited (as manufactured homes are less sturdy), the ground-based options are definitely a good choice for anyone with a manufactured home that isn't moved often.

Caring for the Caregiver smile. I am not talking about any doctor, nurse, or therapist. I am referring to those who care for and look after their elderly friends and family members. This can be a spouse, adult child, adult grandchild, neighbor, or even a good friend.

There are many reasons that people volunteer to be caregivers. Spouses can often not imagine living apart from each other. Adult children and grandchildren may want to return the care that they were given growing up. Neighbors often have a relationship of caring that spans years. Whatever the reason, these people answered the call for help.

Those who have stepped up to care for another person deserve our praise and admiration. What they also need and deserve is our help and support. Caring for another person around the clock can be exhausting. Chronic health conditions, like dementia, incontinence issues, or balance issues, can further complicate that care. Caring for someone else can cause a strain in relationships between spouses, siblings, and extended family. I have seen caregivers ignore their own health and refuse admission to the hospital for themselves. They do this because they fear that there will be no one to care for their loved one if they are not there.

The responsibility for caring for another person can affect all aspects of life for the caregiver. Jobs, school, and vacations can be challenging when taking on a full time caregiving role. Even a trip to the grocery store is complicated when caring for someone who needs constant supervision to be safe. There are resources to help caregivers, but finding them can be difficult.

Many caregivers do not know where to look for help. Adult daycare or respite care for weekends or nights can be difficult to find or prohibitively expensive. There are several national organizations with resources such as AARP, the Alzheimer's Association, Family Caregiver Alliance, and the National Council on Aging. These organizations all have websites with great tips that can offer support for caregivers.

Do not forget to reach out to your family member's primary care physician or clinic care coordinator. They may be able to help you reach out to local resources and support groups. Know that caregivers should never do this all alone. We want to help and support the care you give. The goal is keeping everyone happy, healthy and well cared for – including the caregiver. Thank you for all you do. How can we help?
